Foreign Diplomats See Big Rearmament Race In Nazi Declarations

But Germans See No Paradox Between Conscription Program and Hitler's Peace Pronouncements for the Country.

SELF JUSTIFICATION

Outside View is That Nothing Tangible Has Been Offered the World by Reich.

(Copyright, 1935, By Associated Press)

Berlin, May 2—While enthusiastic Nazis acclaimed the peace gestures in Reichsfuehrer Hitler's Reichstag address, some skeptical foreign diplomats saw in it today the promise of "an unprecedented rearmament race."

Germans openly found no conflict between Der Fuehrer's declaration to the Reichstag that the country "needs and wills peace" and the promulgation a few hours later of a conscription program making possible the largest peace-time army in the nation's history.

In diplomatic and other circles, however, the opinion was heard that "Hitler has offered nothing tangible toward the international peace cause," except an attempt to justify his course.

The motive of trying to allay foreign apprehension to gain sufficient time for fulfilling his arms plans was laid to Hitler by some.

Among the features of the address regarded as unusual were:

1. Its rejection of the idea of national assimilation in the face of continual harping by the Nazi-controlled press on the fact that thousands of Germans lived beyond the borders of the Fatherland.

2. Its opposition to pacts of mutual assistance.

3. Its obvious attempt to placate Italy, France and Austria, while bristling at Russia.

4. Its expressions of interest in preservation of the Locarno treaty.

Soon after Der Fuehrer completed his speech in the Kroll Opera House—it required two hours and 14 minutes—the government issued a law compelling all German males between the ages of 18 and 45 to serve one year in the army.

Jews will become members of the army only in special circumstances, such as war, or in the case of exceptions made by special boards. Jews admitted to the service will not be permitted to become officers.

Germans with foreign citizenship and Germans living abroad are required to undergo military training.

The tone of Hitler's Reichstag address and of the closing remarks of General Hermann Wilhelm Goering, minister of aviation, was that "we have made a real contribution to world peace and now it is up to the rest of the world to follow our lead."

Expressions of Germany's interest in peace frequently punctuated the speech. Der Fuehrer insisted the Reich was compelled to rearm because of the militaristic policies of other European powers.

"What could I wish but peace and quiet?" "We want to spare the German people all bloodshed"; "Every war means a drain of the best element"; "Germany has nothing to gain from a European war"—These were phrases which tumbled from Der Fuehrer's lips.

Various Reactions

Adolf Hitler's Reichstag address brought forth a medley of reactions today from official circles and the press of Europe. The comment ranged from cordiality in London to bitter denunciation in Vienna of the sections dealing with Austrian policy.

London—The convocation of a new European security and disarmament conference was regarded in political circles as the logical answer to Hitler's conciliatory gestures, a view echoed in most press comment.

Paris—Government officials remained silent pending study of the Reichstag address, but newspaper writers generally expressed the opinion it contributed little new to the European situation.

Vienna — Viennese newspapers without exception condemned the Reichsfuehrer's declarations concerning his Austrian policy.

Rome—An interpretation of one phase of Hitler's speech as a refusal to participate in the forthcoming Danubian conference occasioned disappointment in Italian governmental circles.

Geneva—League of Nations circles generally regarded the address as moderate in tone and expressed the opinion it would tend to clarify the European situation.

Kovno, Lithuania—Although political circles considered Hitler's speech aggressive toward Lithuania, they were hopeful his references to reaggression would promote efforts to improve German-Lithuanian relations.

Relief Applications

Washington, May 22 (AP) — Four government agencies—the veterans' administration, the war and navy departments and the Smithsonian Institution—were disclosed today to have applied for approximately $54,500,000 of work relief money to carry out improvements of their properties in different parts of the country. The requests cover projects in 27 states, Hawaii, the Canal Zone and the District of Columbia.

Better Street Lighting At No Increase In Cost

Mayor Heiselman and Public Works Board Accept New Contract Offered By Central Hudson Corporation—Saving Effected of $2,600 a Year For Three-year Period—Will Eliminate 576 Small Street Lamps.

Better street lighting at the same cost was the offer made to Mayor C. J. Heiselman and the Board of Public Works by the Central Hudson Gas & Electric Corporation at the conference held last week, and the new street lighting contract offered by the corporation has been accepted by the city. The total reduction in street lighting costs under the new lamp rate is approximately $2,600 a year for a period of three years. Under the new contract while the city will have improved street lighting facilities the total cost of street lighting will remain the same as at present, approximately $51,000 a year.

The present and new rates for street lamps are:

	Old	New
60 candlepower lamps	$14	$12
100 candlepower lamps	$18	$15
250 candlepower lamps	$30	$25
400 candlepower lamps	$38	$33
600 candlepower lamps	$48	$42
1,000 candlepower lamps	$66	$57

Eliminate "Lightning Bugs"

At the present time there are 576 lamps of 60 candlepower, which have been facetiously dubbed "lightning bugs". All of these small lamps are to be replaced by lamps of 100 candlepower, which will add greatly to the lighting of the streets.

Other Light Changes

The first change in the street lighting system is to eliminate all of these smaller lights, replacing with lamps of 100 candlepower.

The existing 600 candlepower lamps on Albany avenue are to be replaced with lamps of 1,000 candlepower.

On Wurts and McEntee streets all 600 candlepower lamps and the one 250 candlepower lamp are to be replaced with lamps of 1,000 candlepower.

On Broadway, from Stuyvesant street to West Chestnut street, the three existing 600 candlepower lamps are to be replaced with lamps of 1,000 candlepower.

At East Chester street and Broadway the two existing 600 candlepower lamps are to be replaced with lamps of 1,000 candlepower.

When East Chester street is completed 12 lamps of 250 candlepower and one of 600 candlepower will be installed on that street.

At Clinton avenue and John streets the present 600 candlepower lamp is to be replaced by one of 1,000 candlepower.

At Hurley and Washington avenues the present 100 candlepower lamp is to be replaced with a 600 candlepower lamp.

At Greenkill avenue and Clinton avenue the existing 250 candlepower lamp is to be replaced with one of 250 candlepower.

On Abeel street the one 60 candlepower lamp is to be replaced with a 250 candlepower lamp.

On Josephine avenue the two 60 candlepower lamps are to be replaced with two 250 candlepower lamps.

At Liberty and Furnace streets the 60 candlepower lamp is to be replaced with a 250 candlepower lamp.

New Lamps Installed

The Public Works Board out of its own budget will have installed the following new lamps:

A 250 candlepower lamp on Abeel street; a 250 candlepower lamp about opposite 120 TenBroeck avenue; a 100 candlepower lamp at Klingberg and Pettitt avenues; a 100 candlepower lamp on Miller's lane; a 100 candlepower lamp on Second avenue, between Moore and High streets; a 100 candlepower lamp on Fourth avenue; one 100 candlepower lamp on Schryver Court.

A 3-Years Saving

Under the new street lighting contract there will be an approximate saving of $2,600 a year for a period of three years, or a total savings for the three years of nearly $8,000.

The savings will be used each year in improving the lighting system. Next year the Public Works Board if desired can go into another section of the city and use the savings effected by the new contract in replacing small lamps with ones of larger candlepower.

More Night Driving

Since 1925 there has been a steady increase in night driving of automobiles and with the increase in the number of cars on the streets at night it has become imperative that there be better street lighting.

No Increase in Cost

The new contract in other words offers the city better street lighting at no increase in cost.

Mayor Heiselman stated today that there was also a clause in the new contract that if the new administration next year did not desire to improve the lighting that the savings could be taken in cash instead of larger lamps.

There have been a number of reductions in street lighting rates made by the Central Hudson Gas & Electric Corporation in the past several years, and the lamp rates are today approximately one-half what they were a few years ago.

Laborites Challenge The British Air Fleet Plan

London, May 22 (AP).—A government announcement that Great Britain intends to double the size of her military aviation force was met today by a labor party declaration of its intention to vote against increases.

Stanley Baldwin, lord president of the council, announced in the House of Commons today that Great Britain will increase her first-line air strength to a total of 1,500 airplanes in order to obtain parity with Germany and France.

This figure is to be compared to the actual military strength today of 580 airplanes, excluding the navy's air arms.

The House of Commons was packed for the announcement, a large number of foreign diplomats and military observers joining the house members as auditors.

Baldwin told them Great Britain would proceed with its aviation expansion "with all possible speed."

"Everything now requisite for this expansion is under consideration and will be put in hand immediately," said Baldwin. "In this expansion, it is hoped there will be no profiteering in a time of what I might call an emergency.

"In what the government is doing, there is no occasion for panic."

Eve Watson Schuetze, Noted Artist, Died at Chicago on Monday

Wife of Prof. Martin Schuetze, of University of Chicago, had Long Illness—Important as Photographer, Painter and Patron of Arts.

Mrs. Eve Watson Schuetze, about 68 years of age, wife of Prof. Martin Schuetze, of the University of Chicago, died Monday at her residence in Chicago following a long illness. For over 30 years Prof. and Mrs. Schuetze spent their summers at Byrdcliffe, Woodstock, and were always leaders in the intellectual life of the colony, as well as having been active in the early life of the arts settlement.

Mrs. Schuetze was a noted photographer and a painter. Four years ago, shortly after the death of William E. Schumacher, radical painter, she arranged a memorial exhibit of his works at the Woodstock Art Gallery and drew to the colony many of the important connoisseurs and curators from important art centers in the United States. Through Mrs. Scheutze's initial efforts, the strain of which marked the beginning of her long illness, Mr. Schumacher's work was exhibited importantly in New York city and Chicago, and permanent acquisitions were made. Mrs. Schuetze's work on the Schumacher exhibit was an indication of how, in order to help others, she submerged her own important work.

Mrs. Schuetze was secretary of the Renaissance Society of the University of Chicago and as such she was responsible for much of the valuable work done toward exhibiting, fostering and acquiring permanent collections at the university and the Art Institute.

Mrs. Schuetze, born in Philadelphia, studied art under Thomas Eakins and later did her notable photographic studies.

Memorial services will be held in Chicago.

THREE WILL BE GUESTS AT RALLY OF GIRL SCOUTS MAY 25.

Among guests at the Girl Scout Rally at Camp Wendy on May 25 will be Miss Emerald Harper and Mrs. Dorothy Schroeder, former camp directors, and Miss Lillian Parrish, who will be the director this season.

All Ulster County Girl Scout troops have been invited and are expected to be present for the occasion, and each will have a part in the entertainment. Merit badges, instead of being awarded at the rally, will be given out tomorrow night at the Church of the Comforter Hall.

Roosevelt Sanctions First Billion Allotments Under PWA Program

Signing of Actual Orders Will Occur as Soon as Budget Director Drafts the Desired Forms Necessary.

STUDY OF PROJECTS

Wednesday Night Conference Held With Attention Given to Indiana and Alabama.

Washington, May 22 (AP)—Recommendations of the allotment board for spending the first billion dollars under the $4,000,000,000 works program were approved today by President Roosevelt.

The actual orders will be signed as quickly as the budget director drafts the desired form.

The President repeated today at his press conference that he hoped to have the program in full operation by about November 1.

Meanwhile, he has started a study of projects which may be undertaken which do not come within the mandatory class specified by Congress.

From one-fourth to one-half of the $4,000,000,000 has been earmarked by Congress, including some projects of costly nature such as highways and elimination of grade crossings.

Mr. Roosevelt and his three principal aides—Frank Walker, Secretary Ickes and Harry L. Hopkins—conferred at length last night on the problem of finding somewhat cheaper local projects.

Particular attention was given to Indiana and Alabama, whose state directors were here.

The President said both states presented very comprehensive plans. This was regarded as somewhat indicative of approval of their work programs.

Mr. Roosevelt explained the $4,000,000,000 fund has been cut up into state segments and will be carried through on this idea. Early announcement of the allotments to states is in prospect.

He has laid down the rule that state programs must provide for taking off the relief rolls all of the employable unemployed.

The individual projects approved by Mr. Roosevelt today were announced recently when the allotment board recommended them.

The allotments include funds for development of the upper Mississippi and upper Missouri rivers; $100,000,000 for Wisconsin and $10,000,000 for start on the Passamaquoddy power development in Maine.

The President said he probably would take five or six weeks to work out local projects for the various states. In this classification comes construction of schools, bridges and the like.

He emphasized the states and municipalities can share a large portion of the expenditure. He said this would increase the work planned by the $4,000,000,000 expenditure.

National Bank Loans.

Washington, May 22 (AP).—National bank loans recorded their first increase since October, 1933, during the period from December 31, 1934 to March 4, 1935. The increase was given as $1,252,000. This was disclosed today in an announcement by J. F. T. O'Connor, comptroller of the currency. Though the increase was comparatively small, it contrasted with a decrease of $409,375,000 in loans and discounts between March 5, 1934, the date of the spring call that year for statements of condition, and March 4, 1935, the date of the last call.

President Vetoes Bonus and Warns Congress In Message

Highlights Of The President's Message Vetoing Bonus Bill

Washington, May 22 (AP).—Highlights of President Roosevelt's bonus veto message:

"To resort to the kind of financial practice provided in this bill would not improve the conditions necessary to expand those industries in which we have the greatest unemployment."

"I hold that that able-bodied citizen, because he wore a uniform and for no other reason, should be accorded no treatment different from that accorded to other citizens who did not wear a uniform during the world war."

"To meet a claim of one group by this deceptively easy method of payment will raise similar demands for the payment of claims to other groups."

"It invites an ultimate reckoning in uncontrollable prices and in the destruction of the value of savings, that will strike most cruelly those like the veterans who seem to be temporarily benefited."

"Every country that has attempted the form of meeting its obligations which is here provided has suffered disastrous consequences."

"The statement x x x that payment will discharge and retire an acknowledged contract obligation of the government is, I regret to say, not in accordance with the fact. It wholly omits and disregards the fact that this contract obligation is due in 1945 and not today."

"To argue for this bill as a relief measure is to indulge in the fallacy that the welfare of the country can be generally served by extending relief on some basis other than actual deserving need."

"Today, the credit of the United States is safe but it cannot ultimately be safe if we engage in a policy of yielding to each and all of the groups that are able to enforce upon the Congress claims for special consideration."

"I believe the welfare of the nation, as well as the future welfare of the veterans, wholly justifies my disapproval of this measure."

Supreme Court Term May Continue Into June, If Necessary

The present term of supreme court will be continued over into June if necessary in order to dispose of all cases which come under the strike-off order of the court. Justice Schirick will continue the term until every case coming under the rule has had an opportunity to either be tried or stricken from the calendar. This is a move to clear the calendars of the district of old cases which have been at issue for two years or more in order that the newer cases may be given a chance for trial.

The supreme court calendars are made up with the older cases first. Naturally these older cases are taken up first for trial and the newer additions to the calendars frequently are never reached during a term and litigants are not afforded an opportunity to go to trial. Under the law preferred causes involving infants or where death claims are involved are placed at the head of the calendar under the preferred causes. Many of these cases are tried each term first and are about the only new cases which have the opportunity of being tried before the trial terms end.

In order to correct this and dispose of some of the old cases the Appellate Division recently called all of the trial justices of this district into conference. It was then decided to continue the May terms into June and over until September if necessary in order to clean up the old cases. In Ulster county this will not be necessary since the calendar here is in much better shape than in other counties in the district. Judge Schirick however expects that he will have to hold court at least during the early portion of June in order to care for the cases which come under the strike-off rule.

Tuesday Justice Schirick said he would continue the term next month at least until the strike-off cases were disposed of or so long as there was any business ready for the court. There are nearly 100 cases which come under the strike-off rule.

The day calendar now is:

Nos. 193, 114, 125, 170, 160, 35, 37, 72 to 76 inclusive, 81, 81¼, 81½, 81¾, 82, 87, 88, 89, 89½, 29, 49, 36, 26-A, 162.

Fur Prices Danger Point

Newark, N. J., May 22 (AP)—Morris S. Tremaine, New York state comptroller, today declared the federal government's finances "are far from the danger point regardless of the alarmist." "A careful study of the report of the secretary of the treasury for the last five years will clearly indicate this, despite the emergency expenditures," he said in a speech prepared for delivery before the New Jersey Bond Club. "At the same time, it will show that the credit of New York state and its municipalities is outstanding, as shown by the record and the confidence of investors in its securities."

Treasury Receipts

Washington, May 22 (AP).—The position of the Treasury on May 20 was: Receipts, $54,251,593.60; expenditures, $70,988,993.69; balance, $1,611,057,416.42; customs receipts for the month, $20,266,956.76. Receipts for the fiscal year (since July 1), $1,278,175,033.98; expenditures, $4,308,121,003.74 (including $2,171,685,091.00 of emergency expenditures); excess of expenditures, $3,029,945,969.76; gross debt, $28,483,274,659.72, a decrease of $1,889,263.75 under the previous day; gold assets, $8,743,722,946.11.

Benjamin Hochman of Ellenville Loses His Action For $20,000

Brought Suit For Alleged Injury To His Head When He Claims a Brick Struck Him—Action To Recover Under Insurance Policy.

Benjamin Hochman of Ellenville lost his action for $20,000 damages for an alleged injury to his head in October of 1932 when he claims a brick thrown from a chimney under construction in Ellenville struck him inflicting severe injuries.

The action was originally brought against Harry Aronowitz, owner of the property, and Hasbrouck & Belmont, the general contractors, and Gus Menzel, sub-contractor who was constructing the chimney. On motion of Cleon B. Murray the contracting firm was first let out of the case when the court held there was no cause of action against the firm of Hasbrouck & Belmont. Next Mr. Aronowitz was let out of the case as defendant when Andrew J. Cock moved to dismiss the complaint against him. This left Mr. Menzel the only defendant.

The case was submitted to the jury before the noon recess Tuesday but the jury evidently found difficulty in reaching an agreement for it was not until late in the afternoon that a verdict was reached.

Insurance Action

An action to recover under an insurance policy was taken up at the afternoon session. This action, a rather complicated matter, is brought by Mary Hamilton, widow of James Hamilton, late of Gardiner, against the New York Life Insurance Company. Mr. Hamilton, who was a contractor and lived for several years at Gardiner during the New York city aqueduct construction period, took out a policy with the New York Life Insurance Company in 1911. That policy was for $25,000 and the annual premium was $634.75. In 1911 and 1912 he paid the premium as named in the policy and in 1913 there was a dividend and since at that time under the terms of the policy he might borrow on the policy, he borrowed sufficient on the policy under a premium note to pay the premium for 1913. Again in 1914 and 1915 he borrowed on the policy to pay the premium and in 1916 the last payment was made in this manner. In 1917, after he had borrowed on premium notes about $2,500, he did not pay the premium. The company claims that in 1917 when the premium was not paid it figured out the cash surrender value of the policy, notified the insured and after deducting the money already loaned from the face value of the policy, continued in effect some $22,000 worth of term insurance until the cash surrender value of the policy had been used up in payment of premiums and so by 1919 the policy had ceased to exist.

In the meantime Mr. Hamilton had first assigned the policy to the Century Contracting Company and later it was assigned to Mrs. Hamilton. Receipts were offered to show that she and her husband had both signed dividend receipts.

In May 1920 Mr. Hamilton died and the policy was still in the possession of Mrs. Hamilton. She testified that she kept the policy but did not know that it was worth anything. After reading in a paper about keeping lapsed policies she showed the policy to an insurance

Declares Measure Would Invite an Ultimate Reckoning In Uncontrollable Prices and Destruction of the Value of Savings.

NO AID TO RELIEF

It Would Not Improve Conditions Necessary To Expand Industries With Greatest Unemployment.

Washington, May 22 (AP)—Flaunting President Roosevelt's personal warning that the Patman $2,200,000,000 Bonus Bill invited "disastrous consequences", the House thundered the necessary two-thirds to override his veto today.

By CLARENCE M. WRIGHT
Associated Press Staff Writer

Washington, May 22 (AP).—Congress received its Patman bonus bill back from the hands of President Roosevelt today, tagged an unsound and unfair invitation to "disaster."

In the crowded chamber of the House of Representatives, he warned the hostile bonus majorities of both branches of an "ultimate reckoning in uncontrollable prices" and "destruction" of savings via the printing press money route—should his veto be overridden.

Nevertheless, the expectation remained that the house soon would vote the necessary two-thirds to override and the administration would have to depend on a narrow senate margin to win out. Should this happen, the veterans bloc was ready to start on a new tack for whatever it could get. Some of the legislators found in the Roosevelt message encouragement for the Harrison compromise, under which holders of bonus certificates could collect the current value.

Sensing the historic importance of the occasion, a notable gathering was on hand to hear. The seating capacity of both the chambers and the galleries was spoken for long before the time of the address, 12:30 p. m. A sunny spring day accounted for colorful splashes in the galleries, as congressional women-folk turned out in light frocks.

The atmosphere was a mixture of solemnity, suspense and light-heartedness. Raps of Speaker Byrns' gavel were necessary to quiet the hubbub at the opening. Without mentioning the Senate dispute yesterday over the propriety of his personal appearance, the President remarked "with your permission, I should like to continue from time to time to act as my own messenger."

He was accompanied to the Capitol by Mrs. Roosevelt, two of his secretaries—Stephen Early and Marvin H. McIntyre—and Captain Wilson Brown, his naval aide.

Officials of veterans' organizations were on hand, but withheld comment until the message was delivered.

The President arrived at the Capitol at 12:10 p. m.

The crowd standing on the steps and lawns cheered somewhat, and he smiled and doffed his hat in acknowledgment before leaving his open car. His secret service and police escort stood guard.

As the chaplain, the Rev. James Shera Montgomery, delivered the opening prayer in the House, secret service men and plainclothes detectives looked carefully over the crowd.

One was in the press gallery, directly behind and above where the President was to speak.

Seats were at a premium, but Representative Gassaway (D., Okla.) had three of his children with him.

The President first went to the office of Speaker Byrns where he chatted with members of the cabinet who had preceded him. All appeared to be in good spirits.

Some senators were decked out in formal morning clothes, but most of them were in their usual business suits for the occasion.

The senators marched behind Vice President Garner, with Senator Robinson, Democratic leader, and Senator McNary, Republican leader, close behind the Vice President to the House.

The text of President Roosevelt's bonus veto message to Congress today follows:

Mr. Speaker: Members of the House of Representatives:

Two days ago a number of gentlemen from the House of Representatives called upon me and with complete propriety presented their reasons for asking me to approve the House of Representatives Bill providing for the immediate payment of adjusted service certificates. In the same spirit of courtesy I am returning this bill today to the House of Representatives. As I told the gentlemen who waited upon me, I have never doubted the good faith lying behind the reasons which have caused them and the majority of the Congress to advocate this bill. In the same spirit I come before you dispassionately and in good faith to give you, as simply as I can the reasons which compel me to give it my disapproval.

And I am glad that the Senate by coming here in joint session gives me opportunity to give my reasons in person to the other House of the Congress.

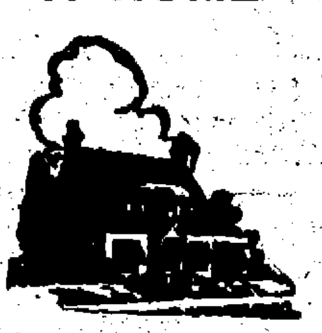

As to the right and the propriety of the President in addressing the Congress in person, I am very certain that I have never in the past disagreed, and will never in the future disagree, with the Senate or

First Y.W.C.A. Report In Budget Campaign Amounts to $1,483

There was a very enthusiastic and earnest group of workers for the 1935 budget campaign of the Y. W. C. A. at the supper at the Y. W. C. A. Tuesday evening. Again roses decorated the tables and at the head table the Higginson Silver Loving Cup was the envied centerpiece.

This was preeminently a business gathering, apparently, and the program prepared was short and to the point.

After the spirited singing during the supper, led by Miss Bell, with Miss Batey at the piano, Mrs. Wood stated that they would change the procedure for the one evening, inasmuch as the girls of the Choristers were going to Saugerties, where the Y. W. C. A. Choristers were to give a concert, and they would have the reports from the chairmen before the speeches. This called forth hearty applause as everyone was most keen to know what the first report would be. When the following splendid announcements were made the applause was very hearty, for it was indeed a very encouraging "first night."

Team No. 1, Mrs. William C. Kingman, Mrs. A. Noble Graham	$170.00
Team No. 2, Mrs. Arthur Wicks, Mrs. John W. Matthews	150.50
Team No. 3, Mrs. Alva Staples, Mrs. Myron S. Teller	174.00
Team No. 4, Mrs. Charles Terwilliger, Mrs. Cornelius Treadwell	180.50
Team No. 5, Mrs. Donald M. Lane, Mrs. Charles L. Arnold (Young Married Women's Club)	192.50
Team No. 6, Miss Elsie J. Phillips, Miss Beatrice Powley (Business Girls' Club)	407.75
Team No. 7, Mrs. Raymond Rignall, Miss Katherine D. Millard (Kingston Choristers and Industrial Club)	207.75
Day's total	$1,48[illegible].00

The largest number of subscriptions brought in by each team was as follows:

Team 1, Mrs. Scott	12
Team 2, Mrs. Bonesteel	14
Team 3, Miss Reeves	11
Team 4, Mrs. Roger Loughran	18
Team 5, Mrs. Betts	6
Team 6, Miss Beatrice Powley	28
Team 7, Mrs. Franz, Sally Gager, Kathryn Burns, each	8

The Higginson Cup went to Team 28, the Business Girls' team.

Mrs. Wood, following the reports, announced that they had with them as a special guest of the evening, the world traveller and lecturer, Walter W. Allerton of Somersworth, New Hampshire, a cousin of Mrs. Reed, whom they had asked to say a few words. Being a public speaker, Mr. Allerton must have heard it said that "Brevity was the soul of wit," and been governed accordingly. He said that he was indeed happy to be present at this gathering of the Kingston Y. W. C. A. on such a happy occasion for he had listened for hours, with interest to what his cousin had on different visits to his home told of the wonderful work carried on in this organization which was proving her statements as to their success by the returns just brought in. Just such organizations were, Mr. Allerton assured them, quietly carrying on a great and fine work for the future wholesomeness and happiness of countless quiet homes to which would be carried the influence of Y. W. C. A. days. He closed by wishing the Kingston Y. W. C. A. all possible success.

Judge Fowler Talks

The next speaker was that good friend of the Y. W. C. A., Judge Joseph M. Fowler, who first paid a heartfelt and wonderful tribute to Mrs. G. F. Rice whom all were missing from her accustomed place as head of the campaigns of the Y. W. The judge counted it a privilege indeed for the Y. W. and for each one personally to have had the friendship and the companionship of a woman of such capability, executive gifts, social understanding, untiring zeal and loving efforts as Mrs. Rice. Her death was indeed a grievous loss, taking from them one who showed true leadership of the highest type.

Judge Fowler was happy, as all are to have for this year's campaign such a competent and appreciated leader as Mrs. Holcomb, and he gladly accepted the invitation to speak to them on the evening of good news. Recalling what one of the speakers said at the Friday night meeting regarding the millions of dollars on deposit in the banks of Kingston, the judge facetiously warned them not to attempt the New Paltz or Newburgh manner of attempting to withdraw such sums of that money as they needed as it was exceedingly dangerous. Then showing that there were over 3,000 depositors in our various banks, Judge Fowler estimated that the average amount of each deposit would be only about $300 or $400, if the average was always maintained because we have no people of very great wealth in our city. So, he felt that it would not be the good fortune of many to bring in large contributions but that they would all have to work hard and bring in a large number of smaller contributions this year. The commodity they had to sell would not need much talking about because its value was now fully recognized in the community by everybody. Its power for usefulness was estimated at 100 per cent.

Mrs. Holcomb followed Judge Fowler and announced that a prize would be given to the team receiving the largest number of contributions of $1 or more over the entire period of the campaign. At noon on Saturday the "Free For All" period of the campaign would be in order. At the get-together supper on Friday evening of this week, at 6 o'clock at the Y. W. C. A., those present will be treated to a very clever little play to be put on by some of the Business Girls.

CONTESTS BEAUTY'S SUIT

Fighting a $250,000 damage suit, Louis J. Ehret, Jr. (left), of a New York brewery family, is shown with his attorney, Frederick Meller, as they appeared in a New York court in a case brought by Eileen Wenzel, former Ziegfeld showgirl. Miss Wenzel charged that her beauty and career were ruined when Ehret's car, in which she was riding, crashed into a lamp post. (Associated Press Photo)

Postage Stamp Size Was Cut to Reduce Expenses

John Wanamaker, while postmaster general of the United States, instituted many economies, and in 1890 asked for bids on postage stamps of a much smaller size than had been used in this country in the preceding 20 years, notes a writer in the Chicago Tribune.

There was no valid reason for using large stamps, as many countries, Great Britain, France, and others, had always used small stamps for the ordinary postal rates. The change must have been to the public advantage, for only the slightest difference will be found between these stamps of 1890 and all the regular issues since that date, and any attempt to return to the large sizes of the '80s would be opposed.

All the regular postage stamps issued between 1890 and the latter part of 1894 are closely related in design, even though they were the product of two engraving establishments, and despite the fact that there were some changes in colors and in paper. Those printed prior to 1894 were made under contract by the American Bank Note company, which had been low bidder for each four-year period since 1879, while those printed after 1894 were made by the government itself, through the agency of the bureau of engraving and printing, a division of the Treasury department. The bureau had printed many revenue stamps, but until this time had not attempted to print postage stamps. Its success is evident, for since that time no private company has been invited to submit bids in competition with the bureau.

BELL-ANS FOR INDIGESTION

"Moshimoshi!"

That's "Hello!" in Japanese. Just recently Tokyo became our telephone neighbor. Now you can talk to tourist friends in the land of cherry blossoms, and business men can bridge more than 8,000 miles of land and water.

There are now sixty countries that can be reached by Bell System telephones. In fact, there are only three countries in the world with more than 100,000 telephones—Russia, China, and New Zealand—that cannot be reached by telephone from the United States.

In figures, it means that 93 per cent of the thirty million telephones of the world are connected with the instrument in your office or home, thus enabling you to reach practically anyone, anywhere, any time, and enabling anyone to reach you. New York Telephone Company.

Head New Units In State Police Force

Major John A. Warner, superintendent of the state police, has named the officers who will be in command of four of the seven units which will compose the newly created "Scotland Yard" division of the state police.

The four unit commanders named Tuesday are:

Sergt. J. J. King for B Troop at Malone; Lieut. Edward L. Hageman, K Troop at Hawthorne; Corp. Ernest Maynard of C Troop at Sidney and Corp. E. F. Hoyt of A Troop at Batavia.

The commanders for the units to be established at the Troy and Oneida barracks will be named later in the week, Major Warner declared.

Announcing the appointment of the four he said:

"These men, acting under their captains, will have direct charge of all Bureau of Criminal Investigation activities in their several troop headquarters.

"They have been selected because of their experience in the investigation of crime and because of their experience in special fitness for it and also for administration work. They will be expected to coordinate all activities of their respective staffs in the handling of all criminal investigations and in cooperating with other troop staffs and local police as well as federal agents when necessary."

Drunken Driving Charged.

Emerson Collins, 32, of Walden, was held in $1,000 bail on a charge of driving while intoxicated, after his car had been in collision with one driven by Policeman David Leone in Newburgh.

Great armies of gnats annually herald the arrival of drumfish schools of the South Carolina coast in early spring.

Jane Addams, 74, Dies in Chicago, Founder of The Famous Hull House

One-Time Winner of Nobel Peace Award Succumbs to Operation Tuesday Night for Adhesions of Intestines.

VERY COURAGEOUS

Had Fought From Childhood Against Illness and Turned Talents Toward Helping Others.

JANE ADDAMS

Chicago, May 22 (AP).—Jane Addams is dead. Her long career as peace and social worker for which she was internationally known, came to an end late yesterday in Passavant Hospital, where she died, apparently without pain, after a major surgical operation, performed last Saturday for the removal of intestinal adhesions. She was 74 years old.

With her death physicians disclosed for the first time that the founder of Hull House—Chicago's widely known social settlement—was the victim of an internal cancer, which had been known to them as far back as 1932, when she underwent an operation for the removal of a pelvic cancer.

The condition of Miss Addams, who was a Nobel prize winner for her efforts in behalf of peace, was disclosed in a bulletin issued by Drs. James A. Britton, Charles A. Elliott and A. H. Curtis. It said:

"Miss Addams was operated on last Saturday for relief of intestinal obstructions. There was also present a cancerous growth. The obstruction was relieved, but it was impossible to remove the growth. The cancer was apparently secondary to a pelvic tumor removed in 1932."

Jane Addams erected two fortresses of fame: Her ideals of humaneness, an intangible stronghold of the spirit, and Hull-House, the tangible expression of that ideal.

The twain were born of a heart filled with a desire to "complete the mobilization of the human spirit" by bettering the life of the world, a desire which swept aside all barriers of race and religion.

In her search for practical means of forwarding this ambition, Hull-House was her laboratory and like that building in Menlo Park from which the genius of Edison sent out devices to conquer darkness by physical light, so Hull-House became the source of social discoveries which sent rays of spiritual light into the darkest pits of civilization.

The Illinois hamlet of Cedarville, alone, knew of her birth on September 6, 1860. Before her life span was much more than half completed the world was heeding the voice of an humanitarian whose passion for peace and justice became known from the tenements of Halsted street to the tribunal of nations at Geneva.

Miss Addams was militant against wht she called "the stupid atrocities of contemporary life, its arid waste, its meaningless labor, its needless suffering and its political corruption." Particularly was her influence felt in the fight for abolition of the scourge of war.

She founded one movement for world peace and was an active participant in nearly all others. Her study and work in sociology left an imprint in many lands. Her "New Ideals for Peace" became a textbook of international friendships.

She shared the 1931 Nobel peace prize with Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University.

Yet her pacifism was not confined to affairs between governments; it called for tolerance and reason between physical and spiritual neighbors in every human relationship. Racial and religious antipathies, exploitation of labor, wholesale buying of votes by small favors as a mask to corruption that diseased the whole body politic, inequalities before the law because of sex and the whole gamut of suspicions and fears engendered by age-old divisions of mankind comprised the host against which this crusader raised her banner. And she was proud of her pacifism.

"The militarists," she once said, "in the guise of patriotism have falsely portrayed pacifism as fanaticism. They profess Christianity; yet their armies slay and butcher. It is they who are fanatics, fanatical about power and greed and killing."

Her advocacy of peace reached its zenith in 1915 when she called the International Congress of Women at The Hague. An ending of the World War was its goal. In this the congress failed, but out of it grew the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom. Miss Addams, who had presided at The Hague, became the first international president of the league.

With Ellen Gates Starr, Miss Addams opened Hull-House on September 18, 1889, at Halsted and Polk streets, in the midst of Chicago's squalid west side. An old mansion stood there. It was once the homestead of Charles Hull, a wealthy farmer and landowner. The great Chicago fire of 1871 had crept close to its brick walls, sweeping over nearby pastures.

"God's hand must have saved the house for us," Miss Addams once said.

Immigrants of two score and more nations, who had come to the capital of the west to seek work and freedom, floundered in the Halsted street neighborhood. Only three years before, the Haymarket bomb and riot had thrown Chicago into turmoil. Every immigrant was eyed with suspicion.

Enticing these people into Hull-House was the hardest task for the young settlement workers. The racial tides surged strong, one against the others. But the hatreds were conquered and Hull-House today fills a city block. Six thousand men, women and children crowd into its activities each week. The long struggle was told by Miss Addams in "Twenty years at Hull-House."

Miss Addams was born of Quaker parents, John and Sarah Addams. The mother died soon after Jane's birth; her childhood was lonely. John Addams was a banker-miller, an assemblyman and close friend of Abraham Lincoln.

The social worker suffered all her life from a childhood affliction, curvature of the spine. This deformity, she related, made her shrink from appearing in public with her father, lest he be chagrined by having it known this "ugly duckling" was his.

At the age of 17 Miss Addams entered the Rockford Female Seminary. In 1881 she was one of four graduated on the day the seminary became Rockford College.

Miss Addams never married, but she admitted, "there were several gentlemen."

FAT AND LEAN YEARS

Insurance is very old, says an insurance man who has been looking it up. The ship owners of ancient Greece pooled their risks, so that when any owner lost a vessel the loss was borne by the general fund. The guilds of the middle ages had similar practices. Even public insurance is ancient, he says. There was the celebrated plan underwritten by Pharaoh in Egypt, at Joseph's suggestion, when 20 per cent of the grain reaped during the seven boom years was saved to carry the nation over the ensuing seven years of depression.

Our big industries have been learning that strategy, and many of them were saved this time by the surplus accumulated during the seven fat years ending in 1929. Governments, though, are slow to learn. And when they do incline to such methods, sometimes their citizens object that it's unpatriotic or unconstitutional. Governments are obliged more and more to look ahead for their people. But it is better when the people can do it for themselves. We have made a notable record in this line lately. Since the depression began, our life insurance companies have paid more than $10,000,000,000 to living policy holders. The insurance people have a right to brag about it.

GOLDEN MACHINERY.

Chemical engineers meeting at Wilmington, Del., seriously discussed the question of using gold and other precious metals to make machinery and utensils of various kinds for use in industry and the arts.

Scientifically, if the cost is disregarded, there are good arguments for it. Corrosion, caused by chemical fumes in many industrial processes, and a great destroyer of base metals such as iron and copper, has scarcely any effect on gold and platinum, and not much on silver. Gold and silver have the disadvantage of greater softness than iron, but can be hardened with platinum, nickel and other alloys. They would be especially useful in the manufacture of chemicals and of foodstuffs and other things which must be protected from the chemical reactions often caused by inferior metals. Some chemical equipment already contains gold and silver. Silver is especially valuable as lining for vessels used in food manufacture, because it is not corroded by food acids.

The rapid extension of the precious metals for industrial and domestic purposes doesn't seem very likely, when they are so expensive, and when governments are hoarding the gold and silver. But there's no telling. If the nations should go off the gold basis, adopting a commodity unit of value or some other non-metallic unit, golden machinery might be cheap.

FINGERPRINTED WOMEN.

The fingerprinting movement was given strong support at the recent convention of the New Jersey Federation of Women's Clubs, when 400 women were fingerprinted in a single afternoon, and more than 1,000 before the close of the sessions. Said the official in charge of the work: "We feel certain that universal fingerprinting is bound to come. It is the only positive personal identification of an individual, and even identical twins or the Dionne quintuplets can easily be distinguished by the method. This may save you from the fate of an unknown identity."

So far, interest in universal fingerprinting is strongest in the East than elsewhere in the country. Police officials in New York and New Jersey recommend it as a safety measure, and many citizens are having their fingerprints recorded. Some day, perhaps, fingerprints will be registered along with births. When that time comes, however, there ought to be a law against mothers using them to find out who ate the jam or forgot to put the lid back on the sugar bowl.

CONGRESSIONAL SPOONS

It's too bad about congressional cutlery. Silver spoons, knives, forks, napkin rings, and even sugar dishes and cream pitchers, disappear with distressing frequency. Visitors, using the restaurant as guests of congressmen, can't resist the temptation to take away souvenirs. And to tell the truth, many congressmen themselves can't resist it, especially toward the end of a session. The stuff makes fine mementoes and may become historic in time.

Representative Lindsay of North Carolina, who as chairman of the House accounts committee is distressed by the heavy loss in tableware, is thinking of removing temptation by taking the distinguishing engravings off the silver. That is one way. Another might be to ask for a special appropriation to provide souvenirs for the congressmen and their guests.

That Body of Yours

THE METABOLISM TEST

Three individuals decide to eat the same kind and amounts of food, perform exactly the same amount of work or exercise, go to bed at the same hour and also get up at the same hour.

At the end of one month one has gained five pounds, one has lost five pounds and the other has remained at the same weight.

Now as food, exercise and rest have everything to do with weight why should there be this difference in weight at the end of the month?

Generally speaking it is a matter of the thyroid gland. The one who added weight has a thyroid gland that does not manufacture as much juice as is necessary to cause the body processes to use up or burn up the amount of food eaten and so the extra five pounds was stored away in the body as fat.

The one who lost weight likely had a thyroid gland that was a little overactive and so much juice was manufactured that the processes worked faster—heart, lungs, skin, kidneys—and not only burned up all the food eaten but found it necessary to use some of the body tissues to supply food or fuel for the body's needs.

The one who neither gained nor lost weight had a thyroid gland whose juice was just sufficient to supply the body's needs; no body tissue needed, no food stored as fat.

Of course sometimes the individual with an active thyroid and who would naturally lose weight eats so much food that notwithstanding the active thyroid there is some left to store as fat. And it is possible for an individual whose thyroid is not very active and who should thus gain weight, to eat such a small quantity of food that not enough is eaten to supply the body's needs and he actually loses weight.

This means then that where there is extreme overweight or extreme underweight it is not always because the thyroid is slow or inactive causing the overweight, or very active causing the underweight.

Thus in these "extreme" cases, the basal metabolism test should be made which shows the rate at which the body processes are working, and estimates the amount of food needed to keep the body processes going. This of course depends upon the height, weight, age, and sex of the individual.

ENEMY'S KISS

by Evelyn McHugh

SYNOPSIS: Alison Kede is horrified to find that the cold and calculating Daphne Sumers, her father's new wife-to-be, is not only reducing her father almost to infantilism, but is calmly ordering Alison's own life as well. Alison is expecting Guy Western for lunch, and Daphne disapproves. Guy has done Alison a great service, and even that Daphne discounts.

Chapter XI

RUNAWAY

ALISON had already discovered that her advice was not needed; a murmurous approval of whatever Daphne suggested met the case.

"Excuse me, miss but there's a gentleman downstairs to see you." The butler stood in the doorway.

"Did he give you his card?" asked Daphne.

"No, madam. He didn't give any name."

"I'll go down and see." Alison was looking nervously at Daphne, hoping against hope. If only she could get downstairs alone, see him for a moment, explain!

But Daphne had already flung down her armful of stuffs; she had her handbag open and was adding a fresh layer of vivid scarlet to her morning mouth.

For a moment the girl hovered, hesitating.

"D'you mind if I go down?"

Daphne, between open lips, answered. "No, run on. I'll be down in a minute."

Thank Heaven! Alison could have laughed aloud in sheer relief. She darted down the stairs, into the drawing room.

Guy was there, waiting for her; the moment that she looked at him all her doubts dissolved. He'd understand!

"Have you got your car outside?" She spoke low and hurriedly.

"Yes. What's up?"

"I'll tell you when we get outside."

He followed her obediently out; halfway down the front stairs asked, "I say, don't you want a hat?"

"I daren't go up!" Alison confessed. "I'll stop and buy one."

They stole like two schoolchildren playing truant through the hall. Guy was laughing silently, Alison met his eye and had to put her own hand against her mouth to stop herself from laughing aloud. She felt idiotically lighthearted, absurdly happy and excited; a mad solution but the only possible one!

And he played up so wonderfully, matching her mood, asking no more questions until they were in the car and safely off.

"What's the game?"

"I'll tell you, but stop first at the corner. There's a hat shop there!"

The hat shop produced a beret of not too bright a blue to match Alison's coat and skirt, and, since she was known to them, put it down. From the shop, she telephoned to Porter, always discreet, and left a message for her father to say that she had forgotten, she must lunch out, she would be back in time to go out with Daphne at half past two.

CONSCIENCE assuaged, she ran back to the car.

"I say, that hat's a wow! I didn't know that a girl could buy a hat in less than ten minutes! Do tell me though—what's happened? Nothing wrong, is there?" he asked.

"Not much! Nothing except I've shocked my stepmother to glory and she thinks you must be the deepest kind of crook!"

"She thinks I'm a crook? Good Lord, what've I done?" To her surprise he sounded less amused than anxious.

"She thinks you ought to have slept in the road in the rain!"

He laughed, the joyous laugh that pleased her so well.

"Sorry! I never thought of it or I'd have swum to Warley!"

"And left little Herbert to do any bag-snatching he fancied," added Alison gaily. "Well, I'm glad you didn't anyway. I'd have been scared to death. But if you meet her, go gentle with her, please."

"I'll be gentle as a lamb," he promised solemnly. "If I have an irresistible impulse to pinch the silver or do a spot of forgery, I'll hold it sternly in check. I want to meet her. Is she one of those dear woolly old ladies who filled up with ideas in 1914 and haven't had the oil-tank emptied since?"

"Good Lord, no!" The idea tickled Alison. "Just the opposite. Hard as nails."

"Oh, that type!" He sounded as if he knew it well and liked it very little.

Alison ended breathlessly. "Well, anyway, I haven't dared to tell her that I'd asked you to lunch, so I wondered if you'd mind having lunch with just me?"

"I'd love it!"

"Good."

"Where shall we go? The same place?"

"Yes. I'd love to. But you must lunch with me, this time," she insisted.

"Sorry!"

"You must!"

He ran the car alongside the pavement and stopped.

"What's the matter?" she asked, surprised.

"I'm going to drop you here and go home and sulk unless you lunch with me!"

He looked so absurd as he said it that she had to laugh and give way.

"And then you call me young!" she accused.

They laughed and for a moment he was occupied, turning out of Constitution Hill into the main stream of traffic along Piccadilly. When he spoke again, it was in a different tone.

"You've met your stepmother, then. How do you like her?"

"Oh, all right," Alison replied carefully.

"That's good. You were rather dreading the meeting, weren't you?"

"How did you guess?"

"I don't know. You gave me that impression."

"It was true." She admitted it in a low voice.

"BUT now you've seen her it's all right?" The traffic had stopped for a moment; he had leisure to look round. Alison did not answer and he read her silence correctly.

"I see. Rotten luck for you!"

"I expect I'll get used to it," she said quickly. "It's only that it's funny at first—I mean, having a third person there and the house being hers and not mine and so on."

"You think it'll come off?"

"My father's marriage?"

He nodded.

"I'm sure it will. He's awfully fond of her." It was difficult to keep that noncommittal.

He said quietly, "A pity, if she's not the right kind. You know, I took a great fancy to your father. He struck me as being rather a topper."

"He's a darling!" Praise of her father could always win Alison. "You know, the funny part of it is, he took a fancy to you, too."

"Thank you!"

"You know I didn't mean that!"

"I know perfectly well what you mean. Liking is generally mutual. You're sure he liked me?"

"I know he did. He was going to ask you to lunch today, if she hadn't stepped in."

"She? You mean your stepmother?" He was driving again now and did not look at Alison.

"Yes. As I say, she seemed convinced you were a crook!"

He said thoughtfully, "I wonder what put that idea into her head?"

"Apparently, our having breakfast together!"

"A little hard! Even the honest must eat!"

"That's what's so silly." Alison was breathless. "She seemed to think it sort of settled things—although she's not a bit that kind of person herself, I'm sure."

"You mean not prudish?"

"I should think anything but prudish?"

"Funny!"

"Isn't it? Particularly as in this case it's her own fault!"

"What is?"

"Our meeting!"

He braked with such suddenness that Alison was flung forward; he seemed unconscious of the fact; unconscious, too, that he was holding up the traffic.

"She? Responsible for our meeting? What d'you mean?"

"It was Daphne who mixed up the telegrams and sent me down to that house!"

"Look here, sir, you can't do this!" An angry-looking policeman stuck his head into the window, saw Alison and added, "If you want to talk to your lady-friends, go down a side street and park! Don't hold up all the other traffic."

"Go to——" began Guy hotly, then checked himself. "Oh, all right, constable. Sorry." He trod hard on the accelerator and shot off but they were in the restaurant, had found the same corner table, before he spoke of it again.

"Tell me, why did you say your stepmother sent you to that house? How could she mix the telegrams?"

The WORLD of STAMPS

By QUINTON JAMES

It develops that a special Mother's day stamp was printed this year, too. This one, however, was prepared by Austria, and differs considerably in design from the one presented by the United States in 1934.

The stamp, just received on this side of the Atlantic, uses as its motif a mother fondling her babe. It is in two tones of dark blue. The U. S. Mother's day 3-center bore a reproduction of Whistler's painting of mother, and was deep violet.

The face value is 24 groschen.

Russia Contributes

Two sets of commemorative stamps are the latest from Russia. One group is on behalf of the "Universal Spartakaid," a national athletic meet to take place in Moscow this summer.

There are a total of ten values in the athletic issue, each being printed in two colors. The stamps are unusually large, bordering on the label size. Although square, the design is so arranged that the stamps need be stuck on the envelope with one corner down so that the picture will be in an upright position.

Various forms of athletic activities make up the illustrations, from swimming to skiing. Values start at 1 kopeck and end at 40 kopecks.

The Soviet's other commemorative is to mark the fortieth anniversary of the death of Frederick Engels, leader in the Socialist party. Dated 1895 and 1935, each of the four denominations, 5 to 20 kopecks, bears his portraits.

German Issue

The German national competition of the professional trades in which young workers and employes participated was made the occasion for a two-stamp issue. The design consists of a raised fist holding an oak leaf wreath in front of a swastika. There is a 6-pfennig green and a 12-pfennig red.

Issuance of the stamp, says a dispatch from Berlin, was greeted by some German philatelists as "an attempt to fill the empty reich treasury."

Special Airmails

Cuba prepared two types of a special airmail stamp in celebration of the first international sky train flight with a motor plane bearing two gliders from Miami, Fla., to Havana.

The regular 10-centavo airmail stamp, both perforated and imperforate, was used with an overprint reading: "First international air train, 1935." The face value was increased to 20 centavos.

In addition, the surcharge, in black, carried the names of the two glider pilots, O'Meara and duPont.

Exhibit at Highland

Highland, May 22—The first exhibit of the Stamp Club was held Saturday with the doors of the Highland Drum Corps rooms opened at 10:30 a. m., and it was estimated that fully 100 persons visited the exhibit. There were 41 entries in the senior class and 29 entries in the junior class which included those of 16 years or younger. In the afternoon ten members of the Colonial City Stamp Club of Kingston visited the exhibit and Messrs. Sydney Clapp, president of that Club; C. J. Linson and Arthur Tongue acted as judges. The grand prize in the junior exhibits went to Chester Alsdorf for the stamps of the French colonies; first prize to George Muller, Jr., for Nyasa stamps; second to Richard Lent for U. S. A. commemorative stamps; third to Fred Bragg, Jr., for his collection of U. S. A. bi-centennial stamps, and the cover prize to Thomas Donovan.

The senior grand prize was given William Plank of Marlborough for his Newfoundland collection; first prize to Oliver J. Tillson for his Connecticut tercentenary stamps; second to Mrs. Gladys Mears for her Nyasa stamps; third Minnie Litts for the Tannu Touva stamps; Elmer Randall had a unique arrangement of stamps. Mrs. Gladys Mears' general collection of air mail stamps; William Plank's first flight air mail stamps and Oliver Tillson's collection of commemorative stamps were given awards.

Club members who had exhibits were: Carl Depp, Oliver J. Tillson, Mrs. Gladys Mears, Elmer Randall, Lavergne Davis, Minnie Litts, Donald Wood. Others were: William Plank, George Muller, Jr., Richard Lent, Chester Alsdorf, Richard Corwin, Fred Bragg, Jr., Julius Depp, Thomas Donovan, A. Faust, Freddie Randall.

The other night we listened to a speech by Governor Talmadge of Georgia coming over the air. The radio itself is a wonderful thing but we never expected to hear it ring with a pleasing voice in rich Southern accents denouncing the policies of a Democratic administration. What will Cary be doing next?

A Washington Daybook

By HERBERT PLUMMER

WASHINGTON — West Virginia's baby senator-elect, Rush D. Holt, has set down the date June 19 as the most memorable in his career, but it easily might prove to be anything but that for the 29-year-old young fellow.

June 19 is his birthday and the day on which he will have attained his senatorial majority of 30. Theoretically, at noon on that Wednesday he will be entitled to take the arm of his colleague, Senator Neely, march down the dividing political aisle of the senate chamber to the Vice President's dais and be sworn in.

It may turn out, however, that Holt will be denied the right to make that short journey on his birthday. It all depends on what certain senators now engaged in studying his status decide.

The whole question hinges on whether a man can be elected to the senate when he is not qualified to serve.

Gallatin Case Cited

THE Constitution lays down three qualifications which a person must have to enter the United States senate. He must have attained the age of 30, been a citizen of the United States for nine years and an inhabitant of the state for which he is chosen.

Some authorities contend that Holt is lacking in one of these qualifications; that he was elected to an office which at the time he was unqualified to fill.

The point is made that if Holt is seated there is nothing to prevent a person 26, 27 or 28 years old being elected to the senate in the future. Since such a person can't take his seat until he reaches 30 the effect is to deprive a state of its rightful representation in the senate.

Those senators who take this view cite as a precedent the case of Albert Gallatin, elected to the senate from Pennsylvania in the early days of the republic. Gallatin lacked a year of the required nine years of American citizenship.

He was permitted to take his seat, but a year later, despite the fact he had by that time satisfied the constitutional requirement, he was ousted from the senate on the ground that he was not duly qualified at the time of his election.

Another Complication

THE case is further complicated by the law of West Virginia which requires that every candidate for the senate file with the secretary of state 30 days before the primary election a statement that he is eligible to hold office. Holt filed such a statement when, strictly speaking, it is contended he was not qualified.

The situation is certain to be gone into thoroughly by the senate. Former Senator Hatfield, whom Holt defeated, has filed an election contest with the senate on this very point. The committee on privileges and elections must investigate and make a recommendation to the senate.

There's no particular reason why the seating of Holt should be a party issue. Hatfield, a republican, wouldn't get the seat were the senate to uphold his contest. West Virginia's governor is a democrat and were the Holt seat declared vacant he would appoint another democrat.

MARLBOROUGH

Marlborough, May 22—Dr. Charles Barry, local dentist, is back at work again, after being confined to his apartment due to a badly sprained ankle. Last Monday evening, playing baseball on the Presbyterian Church grounds, he turned his ankle and a sprain resulted.

Alex DeGeorge and friends of New York city visited at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank DeGeorge on Monday afternoon and evening.

Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Vermilya recentlly entertained Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Vermilya of Morris, N. Y.

Miss Doris Lowery spent the week-end in Troy.

Miss Billy O'Brien of Catskill has been visiting in town the last week with friends.

Miss Amy Volckman, who has been spending the past few months at the home of Harrison Dawes, is visiting at the home of her mother in Orange, N. J., for a while.

Irving Clum of Germantown is making his home with his daughter, Mrs. James Kniffen on Western avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Marcks and children and Mrs. Frank Hannigan spent Sunday visiting Mr. and Mrs. James Hannigan of Kingston.

Wednesday evening Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Scott were given a lively house-warming when they were serenaded with fire crackers, flares and plenty of noise, after which they were given a "ride" on a wagon through the streets of the village, attached to an automobile.

At the tea held by the new owners of the "Tally-Ho Inn", just south of the village the following local persons attended: Mr. and Mrs. J. DeWitt, Mr. and Mrs. Frank DuBois, Mr. and Mrs. W. Terwilliger, Mr. and Mrs. Purdy, Mr. and Mrs. William Walsh, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Matthew McCourt, Mr. and Mrs. Warren, Mr. and Mrs. Edwards, Mr. and Mrs. Lyons, Mr. and Mrs. Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Nucilla, Mr. and Mrs. Lodato, Mr. and Mrs. S. Hewitt, Mr. Fuller, Dr. and Mrs. C. Zacherle, Mrs. A. Barclay, Mrs. Margaret Daniels, Mrs. Fred Fowler, Mrs. A. Dunn, Mrs. J. McGowan, Mrs. Michael Bradley, Mrs. Coy, Mrs. W. P. Johnston, Mrs. Ray Barry, Mrs. Joseph Dall Vechia, Mr. Conti, Mrs. Amendola, Mrs. Canzoneri, Mrs. Gallagher, Miss Dugan, Miss Josephine Ortiaston, Miss Ethel Warren, Miss Myrtle Bennett, Miss Helen Walsh, Miss Mary Morrow, Mrs. J. Gallagher, Miss Sarah Newell, Miss L. DeWitt, Miss Kelly, Miss Eleanor Bradley and Miss Lucille Morrow. There were also a number present from New York city.

The Girl Scouts of Marlborough, Troop No. 1, elected new officers recently. Those chosen were Evelyn Knapp, treasurer; Annette Sarinsky, Alice Smith, Esther Brandow and Elizabeth Staples, patrol leaders. They are planning to go to the Scout rally at Camp Wendy on May 25. The food sale was held in the store of Charles Lester. The girls' mothers who helped to serve were Mrs. Lester, Mrs. Barclay, Mrs. Knapp and Mrs. Staples. The girls assisting were Doris Barclay and Millicent Cosman. The sum of $16.35 was cleared.

The sum of $250 was cleared at the annual strawberry festival held last week by the Women's Association of the Presbyterian Church. Mrs. Robert Cole was general chairman and Mrs. Fred Velie had charge of the dining room.

Work has been started on the dock road. This is a TERA project, directed by Town Road Supervisor P. Bunker.

Many Marlborough persons attended the baseball game at West Point last Wednesday afternoon. New York University and West Point played. Tony Quintiliani, a Marlborough boy, who attends N. Y. U., played on the team.

Mr. and Mrs. John Cuen, Jr., are entertaining relatives from West New York, N. J., this week.

Miss Helene Gaffney of Mt. Kisco spent the week-end in town visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Gaffney, of the Lattingtown road.

Sundown Stories

Honors Given

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

THE Indians had found many duck feathers lying around the pond and had dyed them all colors.

"All cannot be Big Chief," said Big Chief Eagle. "All cannot have same honor, but all important and fine in Puddle Muddle."

Willy Nilly felt greatly relieved.

"I give feather to Christopher for his brave wings that can fly high above and his keen, fine eyes."

Christopher walked up and took the feather from Big Chief Eagle.

"We take Mr. and Mrs. Quacko Duck and all the other ducks in our tribe for their loyalty and kindness to each other." Big Chief held out the feathers and they all waddled up, took the bright feathers and each tucked one under a wing. Mrs. Quacko Duck felt a little ashamed for she had not been having very kindly thoughts, but Willy Nilly whispered to her:

"You have been kind and good and taken care of many of us when we have been ill or suffering. Everyone cannot be perfect all the time. You are a kind duck." And Mrs. Quacko Duck's beak was all one large smile.

"The bears, old friends of Indians, of caves, of woods, fine bears, now enter tribe and get feathers!"

Jolly and Honey Bear, Blacky and Jupiter now lumberingly walked up for their feathers.

Then Top Notch and Sweet Face were taken into the tribe and so was Rip.

But when Willy Nilly was made a member of the tribe the shouts that went up could have been heard for miles and miles around!

Talks to parents

Tired Business Man

By BROOKE PETERS CHURCH

Mr. X always came home from work a tired man, physically and nervously depleted. He wanted nothing so much as a few minutes of rest and quiet before dinner, while he pulled himself together, and perhaps talked over the day's events with his wife.

But Mrs. X could not understand this. She felt that the minutes before dinner should be devoted to the children. She encouraged them to meet him with shouts of joy and boisterous accounts of their latest exploits. It was always that way in books. It satisfied her sense of domestic drama.

It did make a pretty picture—the father with children hanging on him and chattering gaily as they entered the house. Then Minnie wanted help with her algebra, and Susie must discuss her report card, and Sam was anxious to tell about a baseball game, and so the time went until, when he sat down to the table, the father was too tired to digest his food.

Maybe Mr. Y or Mr. Z would have enjoyed the program, perhaps Mr. X should have. But no amount of training from wife and children could make Mr. X over, and by the time he reached middle age he was a tired, dyspeptic man with a discouraged outlook on life.

A home should be adjusted to the needs of the parents first, and especially of that parent who must undergo the severest nervous strain, and who has the least time for rest. Without the ordinary hours that a wife and mother works, she can to some extent control her program and make time out during the day. The home will be happier, the wage earner more successful, if he is permitted to observe for himself how he will spend his few leisure hours, and not be forced to be genial and tolerant when he is utterly exhausted.

GLENFORD

Glenford, May 21—The West Hurley-Glenford Men's Club held its monthly business meeting in the Glenford M. E. Church hall Monday, May 13. The following officers were elected for a period of six months: President, James H. Stoutenburg; vice president, Arthur Grey; secretary, Maurice Groves; treasurer, Aaron Gray. After the meeting refreshments were served and all enjoyed several games of dartball.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Tripoco announce the arrival of a daughter Saturday, May 11, at their home. Dr. Downer of Kingston is the attending physician.

W. A. O'Brien motored to New York city Tuesday.

The children of the Glenford school and their teacher, Miss O'Reilly, deserve commendation on the work they have done in improving the school yard. An old fence which partly surrounded it has been removed and small trees and shrubs planted in its stead. A small rock garden and flower beds are under construction.

Melvin Spencer of New York city is spending some time at his cabin on Glenford mountain.

Alton Boyce has returned home after spending a week with his aunt in Newark. Being very interested in aeronautics, Mr. Boyce spent a great deal of his time at the Newark Airport. There he had the pleasure of meeting Amelia Earhart Putnam and Sir Hubert Wilkinson.

Steven Negri spent the week-end at his cottage on the Glenford mountain.

A survey disclosed farmers of the South Plains region of Texas had invested $1,000,000 in tractors in a six-month period.

Blow Hard.

Philadelphia — There's nothing like a handkerchief for a good hard blow, thought Mrs. Louise Tenagalia, 52, as they led her off to the police station.

So she hit Charles B. Ross, 35, landlord, who had her arrested, over the head with it.

Ross, who said the woman ruined her home after he ordered her family evicted for non-payment of rent, collapsed under the blow, and was carried to a hospital.

There was a brick in the handkerchief.

Rattling Good Yarn.

Burley, Idaho—The Hanks brothers, Lloyd, Willis and Edison, went hunting for jack rabbits, but instead tumbled upon a nest of rattlesnakes. Hundreds of the serpents, they said, came forth to do battle. The brothers opened fire with rifles and when shells gave out resorted to rocks. Before the snakes retreated 50 were killed.

Duffers Ahoy!

Seattle—There may not be such a thing as world's record golf score, but Hortense Harley, foremost yachtswoman of Seattle, claims one now.

In her first attempt at the game after a series of lessons she confessed she took an hour and 113 strokes to play two holes.

"When I got to the third tee and figured up that it would take me 904 strokes and eight more hours to finish the 18 I just simply quit right then and there for good," she said.

Should be Happy.

Marshall, Minn.—A. J. Gag, druggist here, caught his cash register robbing itself.

Almost daily shortages for the past year puzzled and worried him—until he took the cash register apart.

At the bottom of the register he found $107.80 in dimes, four pennies and a quarter. The coins had slipped through an unnoticed crack.

MICHIGAN'S BEER THIRST REPORTED ON INCREASE

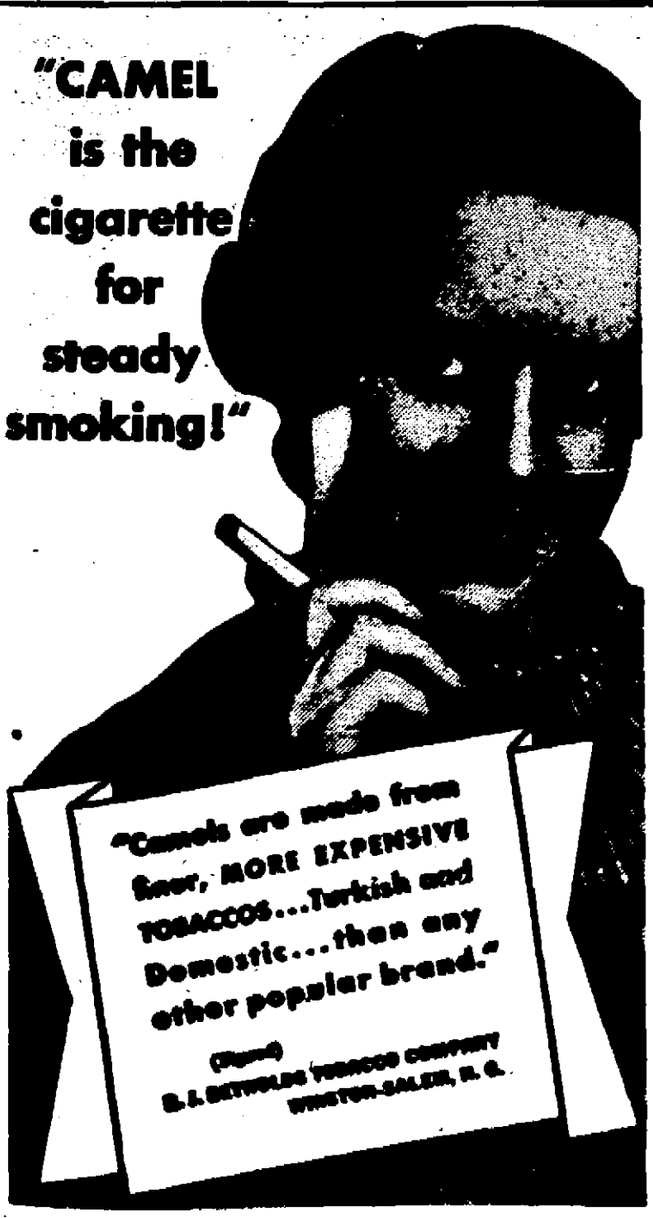

Lansing, Mich. (AP)—In the two years that beer has been legal in Michigan consumption has leaped to 1,564,687,184 bottles a year, or an average of 152 for ever man, woman and child in the state.

And consumption is on the increase, according to figures on file in the office of the state liquor control commission here.

A further peek into the records of the commission on the second anniversary of the return of legal beer shows that the state has collected $5,829,537.61 in beer taxes. The federal government has received about four times that amount.

WHY THIS SALE

RIGHT IN THE HEART OF THE SEASON?

We are very glad to have all the folks in Kingston and the neighboring towns around to know, that we are eager to make all the friends we possibly can. Being engaged in the business of catering to the needs of the infants and toddlers and boys and girls up to their junior years, we are of course particularly interested in cultivating the interest, patronage and friendship of their mothers and daddies, their sisters and brothers, their aunts and their uncles and in fact of everybody who loves children—and who does not love children—everybody does of course, so that we are really interested in winning the friendship of everybody in this county and even nearby. With this goal before us, we have set out with this STOREWIDE SALE to win the friends we are seeking and in doing so we trust that we have left nothing undone that we might have done, to "GIVE, AS WE NEVER GAVE BEFORE" in Values, in Service and in Satisfaction to all of you dear readers who sense the "sincerity of purpose" in back of this undertaking.

You indeed will be glad you came to share in this event, so here is hoping you shall afford yourself, your dear little ones and us the pleasure of inspecting the offering we are now very happy to bring to your attention and which shall prevail for 10 days as specified in this advertisement.

Sincerely Yours,

GEORGE SHURE, Shure's Children's Shop

Long's Filibuster Ends on Technicality

Washington, May 22 (AP).—Senator Long (D.-La.) provided the Senate with an uproarious prelude to its march to the House today for President Roosevelt's veto of the Patman bonus bill.

Gibing at President Roosevelt's work relief wages, kidding colleagues, reading from a dictionary, he threatened to break up the show by an all night filibuster against the resolution authorizing the joint session. But finally he tripped over a quirk in Senate rule and the filibuster was wrecked just as other senators were returning from their dinner last night.

Before that, the Senate had dug in for an all night session. Members had cancelled engagements to keep a quorum present, and Republicans had joined forces with the Democrats to show Long he could not dominate Congress.

Other friends of the Patman bill did not join in the effort. They attempted to dissuade Long, arguing that he was hurting their cause. He would not be diverted. He had prepared himself by taking a nap in his office, and was ready to make a night of it.

At 7 p. m. he had been talking nearly five hours, mostly to an empty chamber. Senator Couzens (R.-Mich.) inquired how long he intended to speak.

Hair tousled, voice hoarse, Long replied:

"If the senator comes back in about three hours he will be safe."

At the end of six hours, Long left the floor under the impression a quorum call had started. Actually it had not, and when Long returned he found he had lost out under a rule limiting the number of times a member can speak in a single day on the same subject.

More Parking Is Provided Uptown

Through the efforts of the Uptown Business Men, assisted by Mayor C. J. Heiselman, the O. & W. R. R. has cooperated to provide a better and easier entrance to the parking ground in the rear of the Rose and Gorman store.

The railroad has permitted the use of additional space which will more than double the present entrance width, besides making the grade much easier for those using the parking space. Everyone will recognize this as a wonderful improvement. The parking space has also been enlarged so that in excess of 700 cars can find space here without difficulty.

The entrance and exit to Converse street will be improved making parking a simple matter for everyone.

Parent-Teacher Associations

Flatbush.

The annual meeting of the Flatbush P.-T. A. was held Friday, May 17.

Before the meeting the children gave an entertainment of songs and recitations, and thanked the P.-T. A. for the radio.

After the children were dismissed the business meeting was called by the president, Mrs. George H. Doll. The newly-elected officers are: President, Mrs. E. Pothemont; vice-president, Mrs. H. D. Carle; secretary, Mrs. George H. Doll; treasurer, Miss Harriett Thomas.

The meeting night has been changed to the first Friday of every month.

After the meeting the teachers, Miss Cheshire and Miss Silkworth served delicious refreshments.

Annual Turkey Dinner.

The annual turkey dinner and fair of the First Baptist Church will be held Wednesday, October 2, from 5 until all are served.

Girl Is Convicted On Manslaughter Charge

New Orleans, May 22 (AP).—Bonnie Hill, 22-year-old night club hostess, was convicted today of plunging a knife into the heart of her "play boy" lover, John Irving Pierce, 23, in a crowded French quarter night club.

Her trial started yesterday morning and, moving swiftly, ended when the jury brought in a verdict of manslaughter at 1:48 a. m. (C. S. T.) this morning. The jury deliberated one hour and 18 minutes.

Sentence was deferred. It ranges from one to 20 years.

Bonnie, whose slim body shook with sobs as she told of sharing an apartment with Pierce and of the quarrel which preceded his death, stood silently and without emotion as the verdict was returned. She was taken back to her jail cell.

Her mother, Mrs. Luise Hill, 64, of Ozark, Ark., and her brother, Raymond Hill, theological student at Wheaton College, wept at her side as the jury was polled.

Bonnie testified she and Pierce, a writer and a member of a socially prominent Jackson, Miss., family, were intoxicated when they reached the Nut Club in the French quarter early in the morning of March 22, after a night of dancing and drinking at other night sports.

She said they had argued continuously during the night about her past life.

"'You make me so furious I could break your neck',' she quoted him as saying: 'He pulled his knife out of his pocket and handed it to me saying: 'Here's your difference. I'm going to beat you to death.'

"He then called me some dirty names and suddenly moved the table and I thought he was going to strike me, so I struck at him with the knife. I only did it to keep him from hurting me."

"I loved him," she said.

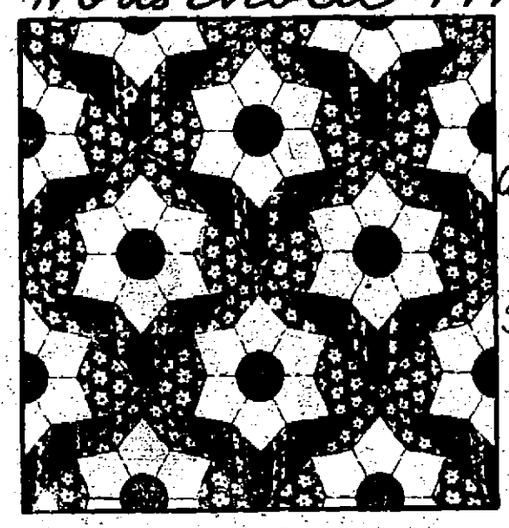

2 Nuns Face Trial.

Berlin, May 22 (AP).—Two more nuns, members of the Order of Saint Augustine, today faced trial on a charge of smuggling money out of the country. The 56-year-old prioress-general, Maria Menke, named Sister Neophytia, and the 57-year-old treasurer of the order, and Gertrud Down, named Sister Engiatia, were charged with five violations of the Devisen, or Foreign Exchange, law, involving the smuggling of 200,000 marks to the Netherlands between 1932 and 1935.

If the intentions of farmers at May 1 are carried out, there will be a small increase in the grain acreage of Canada in 1935 compared with 1934, according to the first crop report of the present season issued by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics.

Make This Heirloom Quilt Flower of the Woods

PATTERN 5367

Flower of the Woods—and that's the starry anemone, of course—will make a quilt that any quiltmaker would be proud to show. The flower—made in a plain material—is set off by the figured material of the background. You could do the flowers in the same material throughout, or in a different color in each block.

In pattern 5367 you will find the Block Chart, an illustration of the finished block in actual size, showing contrasting fabrics; accurately drawn pattern pieces; an illustration of the entire quilt; three color schemes; step-by-step directions for making the quilt, and exact yardage requirements.

To obtain this pattern send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) to the Kingston Daily Freeman Household Arts Dept., 259 W. 14th street, New York, N. Y.

Huge Tax Yield Seen By State Authorities

Albany, N. Y., May 22 (AP).—A $51,000,263 yield in taxes imposed on New Yorkers' 1934 incomes, largest in five years, was seen today by State Tax Commissioner Mark Graves as an indication "we are on the way back to economic recovery."

A total 446,956 persons will have paid that amount—$6,000,000 more than last year—into the state treasury by October 15.

"This is indisputable evidence that the people of New York state are better off than they were a year ago," the commissioner said.

The average amount per return this year increased from $84.46 to $89.17, and 31,650 more persons paid tax than in 1933.

Of the total, $41,560,181.01 already has been deposited and the remaining $9,440,082.48 will be paid in installments ending October 15.

Under the instalment plan, the first payment of one half the total tax was made on or before last April 15, the second payment of one fourth is due June 15 and the remainder on October 15.

This year's total is the fifth largest amount in the 15 years the tax has been imposed, other high years being 1927, $54,502,810.12; 1928, $62,937,273.24; 1929, $54,508,172 and 1930, $51,444,804.67.

Brakes O. K.

Pittsburgh, Cal. (AP)—Orders are orders to Truck Driver Edward Conrad, so when a state highway inspector climbed into the machine and instructed him to apply the brakes suddenly, as a safety test, Conrad complied. When the officer crawled out of the wreckage he attached a "Brake's O. K." sticker on what was left of the windshield. The brakes had stopped the car so quickly that a 10-ton weight in the back smashed through the driver's cab.

GAS BUGGIES—How To Get a Reputation.

Mrs. Fiermonte Says Divorce Talk False

Paris, May 22 (AP).—Mrs. Madeline Force Astor Dick Fiermonte, in Paris on her "second honeymoon" with her Italian ex-pugilist husband, expressed the fear today that "we must spend the rest of our married lives denying rumors we are contemplating divorce."

During their first few days in Paris, the 26-year-old Enzo and his wealthy wife spent most of their time window shopping for an automobile. They finally bought an expensive vehicle in which they are frequently seen driving about the boulevards.

"We hope to end reports of our divorce each time," said Mrs. Fiermonte. "We never dreamed of it. There has never been any argument between us and my husband's first wife. I never saw her, and what is more, I never expect to see her. Enzo and I are both through with the past and are now living happily in the present."

Before leaving for a canter through the bridle paths of the Bois, the couple said they stay in Paris would be "indefinite."

The first inter-city telephone line was built between Boston and Lowell and was constructed by Charles J. Glidden, later of automobile world-tour fame.

This year marks the fifty-fifth anniversary of the incorporation of the Bell Telephone Company of Canada.

The Big Demand of Truck Buyers Today is for Economy

IT PAYS 3 WAYS TO BUY CHEVROLETS

1½-Ton Stake (157" Wheelbase)

Today, when every wise buyer of trucks is particularly interested in getting dependable transportation at lowest cost, the money-saving advantages of Chevrolet Trucks have a particularly strong appeal. Truck buyer after truck buyer is discovering that it pays three ways to buy Chevrolet. You, too, will get better haulage service at lower cost by buying a Chevrolet Truck because of these triple economies:

1. Chevrolet Trucks sell at the world's lowest prices.
2. They use less gasoline and oil because they are powered by six-cylinder valve-in-head engines.
3. They give longer, more dependable service because of the extra quality which Chevrolet builds into every part of its products.

Visit your nearest Chevrolet dealer. Have a thorough demonstration of the right Chevrolet Truck for your needs. Buy it and get better truck performance at the world's lowest prices!

REMODELING AND NEW CONSTRUCTION

HOUSING HINTS

Tips on How and What to Improve

Shoe Mould

After a building has been constructed and seasoned, a crack may develop between the baseboard and the shoe mould, or between the shoe mould and the floor. This occurs when the shoe mould is either nailed to the baseboard or to the finished floor. Such cracks can be avoided by using long finishing nails, driving them through the shoe mould at approximately a 45-degree angle so that the nails pierce neither the baseboard nor the finished floor, but go through the crack between them and into the subfloor.

Check Roof Flashing

If flashing has deteriorated, or if a good, durable, metal flashing has not been properly installed in all of the valleys of a roof, around chimneys, and around skylights, rain and snow water will leak through the roof and cause interior damage. Moisture also will cause deterioration of the roof, walls, and other structural members, which will necessitate expensive repairs. The roof should be carefully inspected in the spring to determine winter damage, and all defective flashing and roofing should be replaced.

Chimney Repair

During the winter moisture may have seeped into the mortar joints in the chimney capping and then frozen and expanded, causing the capping to become loosened or broken. The capping should be repaired or replaced. When doing this work it is good practice to point up all deteriorated mortar joints in the chimney for protection against further deterioration and fire.

Use Durable Nails

When installing wooden shingles or other roofing requiring nails, it should be remembered that the roofing will last no longer than the fastenings. Hot-dipped zinc-coated, copper, or other corrosive-resistant nails should be used.

FENCING REPAIRS TIMELY IN SPRING.

The advent of warm weather provides an excellent time to build new fences and to repair old ones. Even the truck garden should be fenced to keep out chickens.

Deteriorated fence posts should be replaced with new ones, preservatively treated, or of very durable wood, concrete, metal or other suitable material. Sagging wires should be tightened, and broken wires, fence boards, and woven fences of various kinds which will no longer furnish adequate protection should be replaced with new, durable material.

Spring is also an excellent time to paint fences before grass or other plant growth becomes sufficiently high to interfere with this kind of work. A fresh coat of white paint on the posts not only serves as a guide to assist the automobilist who drives at night but white posts and fences surrounding verdant fields, farm woodlands and orchards make beautiful and attractive landscape settings.

Loans for repairing and installing fences are available through private financial institutions cooperating with the Federal Housing Administration, which is insuring such loans under the National Housing Act.

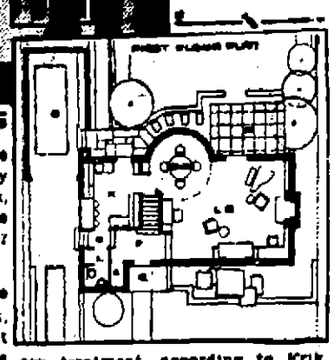

Replace Treads.

The heaviest wear on stairway steps is usually at or near the center of the edge of the stair tread. In many old homes considerable wear has resulted through decades of use. The slight slope of unevenness on the surface of the treads is very dangerous, because it is likely to cause injurious falls. Such treads should be replaced.

Model Fireproof House of Modern Style Is Called "The Home of Tomorrow"

Modern architecture is well adapted to the fireproof concrete home of the future.

Yesterday the real American home was a one-room log cabin. Today it is one of many millions of brick, stucco or siding faced frame houses. What will it be Tomorrow?

THE Better Housing Committee of the Yonkers, New York, Chamber of Commerce believes it has the answer, and has styled its recently completed model house as the "Home of Tomorrow." This attractive six-room dwelling which was erected in cooperation with the Federal Government's better housing program represents an important advance in future home building by being completely fireproof. In addition, it contains some unique features of insulation, air conditioning and decoration.

None of the house itself is really burnable. The walls are of concrete masonry, stuccoed in white. Even the floors, stairs and roof are of steel and concrete. They are surfaced, of course, with linoleum or carpets in the various rooms, and the roof which is the flat type is adequately insulated against heat and cold.

The house is two stories in height, rectangular in shape, and follows the popular modern style in architecture. There are overhanging balconies at both front and rear, and the steel casement windows are deeply recessed. Naturally, there is a garage. The house of the future would be incomplete without one!

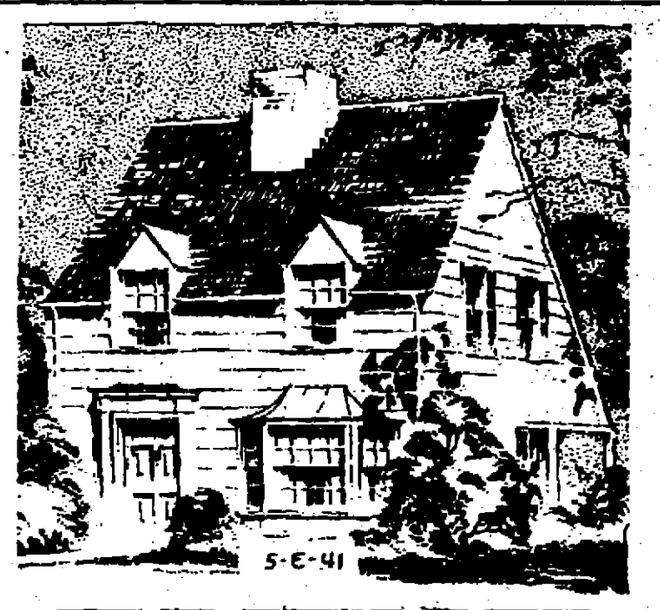

The interior is unusual in modern treatment, according to Erik Kayer, the architect. A circular dining alcove which adjoins the living room is emphasized as a separate room by a dropped circular ceiling and a circular rug of different shade than that of the living room. One side of this alcove is completely glassed in casement windows that overlook a spacious garden.

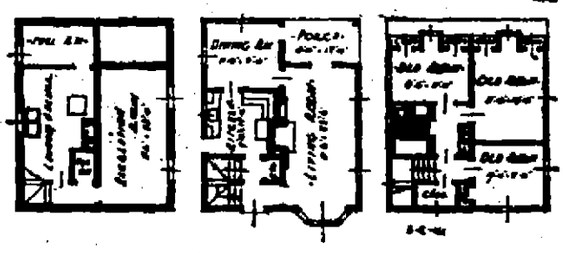

Above the fireplace at one end of the large living room, the entire wall is covered with a mirror which measures 64 by 131 inches. The walls, ceiling, drapes and furnishings of this room are in harmonizing tones of brown and cream—the newest in color combinations. Another example of novel treatment is a "powder" room just a step off the foyer, so located as to be convenient for guests. Three bed rooms, one of which is equipped with bunks instead of beds, and a bathroom are on the second floor.

The "Home of Tomorrow" is completely furnished in modern style and the thousands of persons who have visited the house to date proclaim it to be a far step from the log cabin of Yesterday.

A Cape Cod Home

Copying New England Architecture.

Some day, when you have the time, the money, and the inclination, fill the old car with gas and oil, park the cat with the neighbor, load up the family, and take a trip through the New England States. Particularly the Cape Cod section.

You will see, among other things, homes of the general type and style of the one shown today; for this is an excellent example of Cape Cod architecture that has been handed down from generation to generation.

It is safe to say handed down, because this particular type of architecture was chosen as a shelter by the fishermen of the Colonial days. For more than fifty years, after it made its initial appearance, the design still was being copied throughout New England with few, if any, modifications.

Today, there is an appeal for the Cape Cod home in all sections of the country. With its picturesque qualities, probably no modern home presents a more homelike atmosphere.

To conform with Cape Cod architecture, the exterior of the home should be wide cypress or white pine bevel siding, painted white; and, sometimes, offset with green shutters and a dark stained wood shingle roof. White shingles may be substituted for the wide siding without loss of original Cape Cod character.

The environment and setting of this home is important. It should be located well back from the street with a brick paved walk leading to the front door. An old fashioned garden, with seashells and miniature boats in the landscaping plan, will complete the picture. Don't forget the picket fence, painted in colors to match the house. It belongs.

The porch, instead of being to the front, has been placed in the rear, and is accessible from either the living room or dining room. This is an unusually nice feature, for by screening in this portion of the house, this becomes an additional room for summer use. Proper landscaping of the back yard will greatly enhance its use.

The living room is large, open on three sides, well balanced, and extends the full length of one side of the house. The well planned kitchen is very easily reached from most any part of the home.

Upstairs there are three bedrooms and a bath. These, to be in keeping with Cape Cod antecedents, should be finished with an appropriate wall paper that will match the painted wood trim on the doors and windows. In all the upstairs rooms, there is plenty of closet space; and in the hallway, there is a large closet for storage. These rooms are close to the roof, and for that reason, should be well insulated. Any reliable contractor can advise you about that.

The basement has very sensibly been divided into a combined laundry and heater room, fuel room, vegetable room, and recreation room. The latter has unlimited possibilities.

Because it is impossible to accurately estimate the cost of this home in this community without blueprints, which give all construction and architectural details, it is recommended that you send $1 to the Home Features Service at 24 Noble avenue, N. E., Atlanta, Ga., for the complete working drawings. Have a reliable contractor estimate it for you and determine the actual cost in that manner.

Increased Interest In Air Conditioning

Rapidly growing interest among home owners and business men throughout the country in air conditioning and its application both to new construction and to older houses, shops and offices where remodeling is contemplated, is reported.

Air conditioning proper concerns itself with four main principles, the heating and humidifying of rooms in winter, the cooling and dehumidifying of them in summer and the circulation and purification of air throughout the year. In addition ventilation should be provided when necessary.

Equipment has now been developed in units which will take care of all four of these things or of any of them. Winter or summer equipment may be installed separately and the units may be so arranged to serve an entire building, a single floor or even a single room. It is also possible to install air conditioning equipment to work with the present heating systems in case it is not desirable, for one reason or another, to replace the old furnace with a new one.

The principal advantage of any form of air conditioning is the comfort which it supplies. There is an old saying that "it's not the heat but the humidity". In summer air conditioning it is not only the cooling of the air but the dehumidifying of it as well that makes for comfort. In winter the dry indoor air needs to be humidified and moisture is added to the warmed air to increase comfort and safeguard health.

Added comfort is also procured, by the circulation and purification of the air which obviates the necessity for open windows which cause discomfort and often colds and other minor respiratory ailments. Proper circulation of the air also greatly reduces uneven temperature distribution and the tendency of cold air to remain near the floor.

Because it is a new science in which developments have been very rapid, air conditioning is still not generally understood by many. It cannot be purchased like a furnace or a refrigerator but should be installed by a competent engineer whose technical knowledge will assure its successful operation.

Every installation presents a different problem. The number of people occupying a room, the average length of occupancy per person, the number of lights in it, the insulation of it, the number of outside entrances, all create heat or take it away and have an effect in determining the amount of cooled or heated air to be supplied and the kind and size of equipment necessary. These are only a few of the factors which must be considered in estimating any air conditioning installation aside from the actual units which do the work and the manner in which they operate.

The air conditioning units naturally differ, both in size and cost, depending on the number of rooms they are to serve and the work which they are required to do. One of the simplest is designed to purify and circulate the air in a single room. Other one-room units will not only accomplish these two functions but will also heat and humidify the air, cool and dehumidify it or do both.

These are the simplest methods of air conditioning. Larger spaces—a floor of a house or office building, several floors or an entire building—may be served from a single central unit with a duct system for distributing the conditionad air to the places where it is required. It is also possible to add summer conditioning without winter or vice versa.

The principle of all conditioning is fairly simple. The action of a fan in the conditioner draws in air which passes through a filter removing dirt and dust particles. The air then passes over a series of coils where it is heated in winter or cooled in summer. In summer the moisture is condensed from the air as it cools. In winter, however, after it is heated, the air must pass through a humidifier where moisture is supplied.

The conditioned air, after being so treated, then passes through ducts and is discharged through registers to the rooms it is to serve. In the case of a single conditioned room the only difference lies in the fact that ducts are not necessary as the conditioned air passes direct from the units into the room.

The coils, previously mentioned, over which the air passes, may be heated with steam or hot water supplied from a furnace, or cooled with a liquid refrigerant, sometimes water. In some cases separate coils for cooling are chilled by connecting them directly to a refrigerating machine.

The growth of air conditioning is the best assurance of its permanency and architects throughout the country are advising its installation in new buildings everywhere as it seems likely that within a few years both residences and office buildings, not so equipped, will be considered obsolete.

A great many air conditioning installations this year are going into homes, shops and other business buildings that are being renovated or remodeled. There is a rapidly growing trend for summer air conditioning of restaurants, tea rooms and cafes, as well as beauty salons and apparel shops. Many private offices are being equipped with single-room cooling units. Like other permanent equipment built into a building, air conditioning comes under the loan insurance provisons of the National Housing Act and such installations can be readily financed by private companies, banks or loan associations under the facilities arranged by the Federal Housing Administration.

Air conditioning is not expensive when considered in light of the results obtained, but its actual cost for any given space can only be determined by consultation with specialists.

BUILT-IN MIRRORS FOUND CONVENIENT

Built-in mirrors are valuable aids in maintaining personal appearance, and, properly placed, they contribute to the decoration of a home and tend to give the impression of added size to a room.

In bedrooms or dressing rooms, if a mirror does not fit in with the general scheme of decoration or surroundings, it may be attached to the inside of the closet door.

They are very essential but must be used with discrimination.

Broadway: "Traveling Saleslady." How women do in the ancient art of salesmanship is demonstrated by Joan Blondell and Glenda Farrell in this laugh novelty that gives the two young ladies every opportunity of turning on their charm. There are some funny moments during the film, some of the dialogue is enjoyably humorous and the work of Hugh Herbert and Ruth Donnelly in the supporting cast is a highlight of the show.

Orpheum: "Enter Madame" and "Circus Shadows." Elissi Landi is to be seen as a temperamental artist in the first attraction, a singer who feels she has the world at her feet and who is finally cut down to her proper size by the man who loves her. "Circus Shadows" is another one of those stories woven around folk who live under the spread of the tents. Dorothy Wilson heads the cast.

Kingston: "The Case of the Curious Bride" and "I've Been Around." Perry Mason, ace detective and man about town, steps in and solves his most baffling murder mystery for your benefit in the opening feature at the Kingston. Mr. Mason is an old "smoothie" and he handles his murders with charm and grace. This kill drama is unusual because it hinges around the peculiar circumstance of a man being murdered twice, if such a thing could possibly be. Warren William is a gracious Perry Mason and Margaret Lindsay and Allen Jenkins add beauty and spice to an interesting and well acted play. "I've Been Around" is the second feature with Chester Morris starred.

HOLLYWOOD SIGHTS and SOUNDS

By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—A star who has a large following in America is valuable to any studio, but his value is doubled and trebled if his appeal extends also to foreign countries.

In the silent pictures all stars had an equal chance for popularity abroad, but in talkies those actors who have a special "style" are handicapped for foreign acclaim unless their particular type happens to be intelligible to fans outside America and other English-speaking countries.

Mae West is one of the highlights at American box-offices, but in many other parts of the world the West humor passes over the fans' heads. Will Rogers is aces at home, but a crackling thrust at some American foible uttered by Will from a screen in Poland, say, misses fire.

Garbo Leads Field Abroad

Garbo has been reported slipping as a favorite in America, but in Europe she leads the field, and there one mentions her name only with reverence. Laurel and Hardy, incidentally, are rated approximately on a par with the Swede in world-wide drawing-power.

As a general rule, foreign countries like the stars that America likes, but only if the stars' screen doings are understandable. That is why the "action stars," like the heroes of the "westerns" and Johnny Weissmuller of "Tarzan" fame, are especially effective no matter what the country's language. A chase is a chase, a fight is a fight, and a kiss is a kiss.

A curious reflection from the European echoes which reach Hollywood is the importance of what Hollywood calls "production value." Pictures with glittery backgrounds carry an appeal abroad that is lacking with films of more ordinary setting.

For some reason Jeanette MacDonald is a special favorite in France, and Norma Shearer is the pet of many British dominions.

Chaplin and Mickey Mouse, however, still can be rated as the true "international stars" because they speak in pantomime and sound.

In the aggregate, patients were admitted to the 6,500 hospitals in the United States on an average of one every 4.41 seconds throughout last year for a total of more than 7,000,000.

3254

Have you made your new sunback frocks yet? If not, here's a fascinating pattern. The back is as brief as modesty allows—so that Old Sol can get on with the tanning as efficiently as possible.

Materials which suggest themselves for such a model are cottons as pique, seersucker, gabardine, peasant weaves, gingham plaids, besides linens and tub silks.

Style No. 3254 is designed for sizes 16, 18 years, 36, 38, 40 and 42-inches bust. Size 36 requires 3 yards of 39-inch material with 1¼ yards of 35-inch contrasting.

MODES OF THE MOMENT

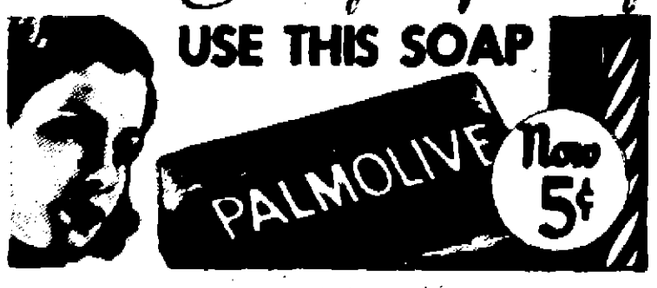

For that greatest of all days in a girl's life, the preparation of the trousseau is most important. Shimmering white satin with elaborate trimming of alencon lace is the smart thing in intimate apparel for the trousseau. The rich contrast of ecru lace on fine white satin makes an irresistible combination that is easy to look at and satisfies the wish of every maid who must have everything as near perfect as possible for this occasion.

Many luxurious sets are shown, each garment being trimmed to match in true ensemble fashion. Some of the outfits are done in silk crepe, others in lace, but there is something very "bridey" about glamorous white satin. The set pictured above includes a bride's nightgown in smartly fitted style without belt. The lace trimmed top and bodice is hand rolled and hand scalloped while a dainty shell stitch ornaments the hemline.

The matching slip is also trimmed with the alencon lace in like manner and features the shell stitched hemline.

The Beaches Call—And Fashion Answers

From Malibu to Ensenada, the annual migration from Hollywood to the sands is under way and the film lassies, casting about for something new in beach wear have found no dearth of it. Since the Pacific beaches have the jump on the rest of the land, fashion's eyes turn westward to determine the style edicts for the summer bathers. Iris Adrian, left, has chosen one that retains the cut of other seasons but it is something refreshingly new as to material—white satin. Mary Jo Matthews relaxes in a beach chair and takes on that first coat of tan in a ribbed knit suit. It has a small collar, a low-cut back, and a row of three cork buttons. Rochelle Hudson, right, goes in for a pert little modification of Tahitian wear. In white and brilliant blue, the brassiere ties in front and in back at the neck. The wraparound trunks are tied in front with a bow.

BARBARA BELL FASHION PATTERNS

Pattern No. 1662-B

Smart Dress for Active or Spectator Sports

The tennis dress is an essential part of every woman's Summer wardrobe. Today's dress is of the dressier type. Perfectly simple, it has plenty of fulness in the skirt for the most vigorous Diana. Then, for chic, there is a very interesting pocket on the blouse, which continues the front side-seam of the skirt. The pocket is trimmed with two rows of braid in shades of the same color. There is a similar trimming on the skirt at the bottom of the yoke line, which gives a two-piece effect to the back of the dress.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1662-B is obtainable in sizes 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Corresponding bust measurements 30, 32, 34, 36 and 38. Size 16 (34) requires 3¾ yards of 36-inch material, ½ yard of each color braid.

HUGE KING RANCH IS SLOWLY DIVIDED FOR HEIRS AND OIL

Brownsville, Tex. (AP)—A 90-year-old empire of cattle and range—the King ranch, known as the largest private property in the world—faces a double threat against its existence.

In the natural procession of heirs, the huge estate of the rugged ship captain, Richard King, who began to found the empire in 1846, slowly is being divided. And as oil derricks begin to dot the grasslands of the lower Rio Grande valley, the domain once reserved for battle herds is changing.

At its peak, early in the present century, the King ranch reached its maximum area of about 1,500,000 acres. It contained an estimated 1,250,000 acres at the time of the division among heirs this year.

Oil rights on the ranch have been leased by the Humble Oil & Refining company for a sum said to be $5,000,000.

Cacti

Although cacti are native to the hot, dry regions of the west and southwest, there are sufficient species that thrive in many sections to make them an ornamental garden asset worthy of consideration. In connection with succulents and rock plants, good results can be obtained with cacti on soils too poor and dry for any other garden vegetation. The species opuntia, or prickly-pear, and the mammillaria (star cactus), will do well in many regions. Yuccas are used with them appropriately.

the House of Representatives as to the constitutionality of the procedure. With your permission, I should like to continue from time to time to act as my own messenger.

Recalls World War Service

Eighteen years ago the United States engaged in the World War. A nation of one hundred and twenty million people united in the purpose of victory. The millions engaged in agriculture toiled to provide the raw materials and foodstuffs for our armies and for the nations with whom we were associated. Many other millions employed in industry labored to create the materials for the active conduct of the war on land and sea.

Out of this vast army consisting of the working population of the nation, four and three-quarter million men volunteered or were drafted into the armed forces of the United States. One-half of them remained within our American continental limits. The other half served over-seas; and of these, one million, four hundred thousand saw service in actual combat.

The people and the government of the United States have shown a proper and generous regard for the sacrifices and patriotism of all of the four and three-quarter million men who were in uniform no matter where they served.

The War Policy

At the outbreak of the war, the President and the Congress sought and established an entirely new policy, however, in order to guide the granting of financial aid to soldiers and sailors. Remembering the unfortunate results that came from the lack of a veterans' policy after the Civil War, they determined that a prudent and sound principle of insurance should supplant the uncertainties and unfairness of direct bounties. At the same time, their policy encompassed the most complete care for those who had suffered disabilities in service. With respect to the grants made within the lines of this general policy, the President and the Congress have fully recognized that those who served in uniform deserved certain benefits to which other citizens of the republic were not entitled, and in which they could not participate.

Benefits Provided

In line with these sound and fair principles, many benefits have been provided for veterans.

During the war itself provision was made for government allowances for the families and other dependents of enlisted men in service. Disability and death compensation was provided for casualties in line of duty.

The original provisions for these benefits have been subsequently changed and liberalized many times by the Congress. Later generous presumptions for veterans who became ill after the termination of the war were written into the state to help veterans in their claims for disability. As a result of this liberal legislation for disability and for death compensation, one million one hundred and forty thousand men and women have been benefited.

During the war the government started a system of voluntary insurance at peace-time rates for men and women in the service.

Generous provision has been made for hospitalization, vocational training and rehabilitation of veterans. You are familiar with this excellent care given to the sick and disabled.

Employment Matters

In addition to these direct benefits, Congress has given recognition to the interest and welfare of veterans in employment matters, through veteran preference in the United States civil service, in the selection of employes under the Public Works Administration, through the establishment of a veterans' employment unit in the Department of Labor, and through provisions favoring veterans in the selection of those employed in the Civilian Conservation Corps. Many states have likewise given special bonuses in cash and veterans' preferences in state and local public employment.

Benefits Under Relief

Furthermore unemployed veterans as a group have benefited more largely than any other group from the expenditure of the great public works appropriation of three billion three hundred million dollars made by the Congress in 1935, and under which we are still operating. In like manner the new four billion dollar work relief act seeks to give employment to practically every veteran who is receiving relief.

We may measure the benefits expended from the fact that there has been expended up to the end of the last fiscal year more than $7,500,000,000 for these items in behalf of the veterans of the World War, not including sums spent for home or work relief. With our current annual expenditures of some $450,000,000 and the liquidation of outstanding obligations under term insurance and the payment of the service certificates, it seems safe to predict that by the year 1945 we will have expended $13,500,000,000. This is a sum equal to more than three-fourths of the entire cost of our participation in the World War, and ten years from now most of the veterans of that war will be barely past the half century mark.

Others Received No Pay

Payments have been made and are being made only to veterans of the World War and their dependents, and not to civilian workers who helped to win that war.

In the light of our established principles and policies let us consider the case of adjusted compensation. Soon after the close of the war a claim was made by several veterans' organizations that they should be paid some adjusted compensation for their time in uniform. After a complete and fair presentation of the whole subject, followed by full debate in the Congress of the United States, a settlement was reached in 1924.

This settlement provided for adjustment in compensation during service by an additional allowance per day for actual service rendered. Because cash payment was not to be made immediately, this basic allowance was increased by 25 per cent and to this was added at compound interest for 20 years, the whole to be paid in 1945. The result of this computation was that an amount two and one-half times the original grant would be paid at maturity.

The Average Case

Taking the average case as an example, the government acknowledged a claim of $400 to be due. This $400, under the provisions of the settlement, with the addition of the 25 per cent for deferred payment and the compound interest from that time until 1945, would amount to the sum of $1,000 in 1945. The veteran was thereupon given a certificate containing an agreement by the government to pay him this $1,000 in 1945 or to pay it to his family if he died at any time before 1945.

In effect, it was a paid-up endowment policy in the average case for $1,000 payable in 1945, or sooner in the event of death. Under provisions of this settlement, the total obligation of $1,400,000,000 in 1924 produced a maturity or face value of $3,500,000,000 in 1945.

One Change Since 1924

Since 1924, the only major change in the original settlement was the act of 1931 under which veterans were authorized to borrow up to fifty per cent of the face value of their certificates as of 1945. Three million veterans have already borrowed under this provision an amount which, with interest charges, totals $1,700,000,000.

The bill before me provides for the immediate payment of the 1945 value of the certificates. It means paying $1,600,000,000 more than the present value of the certificates. It requires an expenditure of more than $2,200,000,000 in cash for this purpose. It directs payment to the veterans of a much larger sum than was contemplated in the 1924 settlement. It is nothing less than a complete abandonment of that settlement. It is a new straight gratuity or bounty to the amount of $1,600,000,000. It destroys the insurance protection for the dependents of the veterans provided in the original plan. For the remaining period of 10 years they will have lost this insurance.

"Violates Principle"

This proposal, I submit, violates the entire principle of veterans' benefits so carefully formulated at the time of the war and also the entire principle of the adjusted certificate settlement of 1924.

What are the reasons presented in this bill for thus fundamental change in policy? They are set forth with care in a number of "whereas" clauses at the beginning of the bill.

The first of these states as reasons for the cash payment of these certificates at this time: That it will increase the purchasing power of millions of the consuming public; that it will provide relief for many who are in need because of economic conditions; and that it will lighten the relief burden of cities, counties and states. The second states that payment will not create any additional debt. The third states that payment now will be an effective method of spending money to hasten recovery.

These are the enacted reasons for the passage of this bill. Let me briefly analyze them.

Admits Trade Expansion

First, the spending of this sum, it cannot be denied, would result in some expansion of retail trade. But it must be noted that retail trade has already expanded to a condition that compares favorably with conditions before the depression. However, to resort to the kind of financial practice provided in this bill would not improve the conditions necessary to expand those industries in which we have the greatest unemployment. The treasury notes issued under the terms of this bill we know from past experience would return quickly to the banks. We know, too, that the banks have at this moment more than ample credit with which to expand the activities of business and industry generally. The ultimate effect of this bill will not in the long run justify the expectations that have been raised by those who argue for it.

The next reason in the first "whereas" clause is that present payment will provide relief for many who are in need because of economic conditions. The congress has just passed an act to provide work relief for such citizens. Some veterans are on the relief rolls, though relatively not nearly as many as is the case with non-veterans. Assume, however, that such a veteran served in the United States or overseas during the war; that he came through in fine physical shape as most of them did; that he received an honorable discharge; that he is today thirty-eight years old and in full possession of his faculties and health; that like several million other Americans he is receiving from his government relief and assistance in one of many forms—I hold that that able bodied citizen, because he wore a uniform and for no other reason, should be accorded no treatment different from that accorded other citizens who did not wear a uniform during the World War.

Sees Discrimination

The third reason given in the first "whereas" clause is that payment today would lighten the relief burden of municipalities. Why, I ask, should the congress lift that burden in, respect only to those who wore the uniform? Is it not better to treat every able-bodied American alike and to carry out the great relief program adopted by this congress in a spirit of equality to all? This applies to every other unit of government throughout the nation.

The second "whereas" clause, which states that the payment of certificates will not create an additional debt, raises a fundamental question of sound finance. To meet a claim of one group by this deceptively easy method of payment will raise similar demands for the payment of claims of other groups. It is easy to see the ultimate result of meeting recurring demands by the issuance of treasury notes. It invites an ultimate reckoning in uncontrollable prices and in the destruction of the value of savings, that will strike most cruelly those like the veterans who seem to be temporarily benefited. The first person injured by sky-rocketing prices is the man on a fixed income. Every disabled veteran on pension or allowance is on fixed income. This bill favors the able bodied veteran at the expense of the disabled veteran.

Unequal Distribution.

Wealth is not created, nor is it more equitably distributed by this method. A government, like an individual, must ultimately meet legitimate obligations out of the production of wealth by the labor of human beings applied to the resources of nature. Every country that has attempted the form of meeting its obligations which is here provided has suffered disastrous consequences.

In the majority of cases printing press money has not been retired through taxation. Because of increased costs, caused by inflated prices, new issue has followed new issue, ending in the ultimate wiping out of the currency of the afflicted country. In a few cases, like our own in the period of the Civil War, the printing of treasury notes to cover an emergency has fortunately not resulted in actual disaster and collapse, but has nevertheless caused this nation untold troubles, economic and political, for a whole generation.

Omits 1945 Obligation.

The statement in this same second "whereas" clause that payment will discharge and retire an acknowledged contract obligation of the government is, I regret to say, not in accordance with the fact. It wholly omits and disregards the fact that this contract obligation is due in 1945 and not today.

If I, as an individual, owe you, an individual member of the congress, one thousand dollars payable in 1945, it is not a correct statement for you to tell me that I owe you one thousand dollars today. As a matter of practical fact, if I put $550 into a government savings bond today and make that bond out in your name you will get one thousand dollars on the due date, ten years from now. My debt to you today, therefore, can not under the promised possibility be considered more than $550.

Final Clause.

The final "whereas" clause, stating that spending the money is the most effective means of hastening recovery is so ill considered that little comment is necessary. Every authorization of expenditure by the Seventy-third congress in its session of 1933 and 1934, and every appropriation by the Seventy-fourth congress to date, for recovery purposes, has been predicated not on the mere spending of money to hasten recovery, but on the sounder principle of preventing the loss of homes and farms, of saving industry from bankruptcy, of safeguarding bank deposits, and most important of all—of giving relief and jobs through public work to individuals and families faced with starvation. These greater and broader concerns of the American people have a prior claim for our consideration at this time. They have the right of way.

Other Benefits

There is before this Congress legislation providing old age benefits and a greater measure of security for all workers against the hazards of unemployment. We are also meeting the pressing necessities of those who are now unemployed and in need of immediate relief. In all of this every veteran shares.

To argue for this bill as a relief measure is to indulge in the fallacy that the welfare of the country can be generally served by extending relief on some basis other than actual deserving need.

The core of the question is that a man who is sick or under some other special disability because he was a soldier should certainly be assisted as such. But if a man is suffering from economic need because of the depression, even though he is a veteran, he must be placed on a par with all of the other victims of the depression. The veteran who is disabled owes his condition to the war. The healthy veteran who is unemployed owes his troubles to the depression. Each presents a separate and different problem. Any attempt to mingle the two troubles is to confuse our efforts.

Even the veteran who is on relief will benefit only temporarily by this measure, because the payment of this sum to him will remove him from the group entitled to relief if the ordinary rules of relief agencies are followed. For him this measure would give but it would also take away. In the end he would be the loser.

For Good of All

The veteran who suffers from this depression can best be aided by the rehabilitation of the country as a whole. His country with honor and gratitude returned him at the end of the war to the citizenry from which he came. He became once more a member of the great civilian population. His interests became identified with its fortunes and also with its misfortunes.

Some years ago it was well said by the distinguished senior senator from Idaho that "the soldier of this country cannot be aided except as the country itself is rehabilitated. The soldier cannot come back except as the people as a whole come back. The soldier cannot prosper unless the people prosper. He has now gone back and intermingled and become a part of the citizenship of the country; he is wrapped up in its welfare or in its adversity. The handing out to him of a few dollars will not benefit him under such circumstances, whereas it will greatly injure the prospects of the country and the restoration of normal conditions."

It is generally conceded that the settlement by adjusted compensation certificates made in 1924 was fair and it was accepted as fair by the overwhelming victory of World War veterans themselves.

Has Much Sympathy

I have much sympathy for the argument that some who remained at home in civilian employ enjoyed special privilege and unwarranted remuneration. That is true—bitterly true—but a recurrence of that type of war profiteering can and must be prevented in any future war.

I invite the Congress and the veterans with the great masses of the American population to join with me in progressive efforts to root a recurrency of such injustice out of American life. But we should not destroy privilege and create new privilege at the same time. Two wrongs do not make a right.

Necessities of Life

The Herculean task of the United States Government today is to take care that its citizens have the necessities of life. We are seeking honestly and honorably to do this, irrespective of class or group. Rightly, we give preferential treatment to those men who were wounded, disabled, or who became ill as a result of war service. Rightly, we give care to those who subsequently have become ill. The others—and they represent the great majority—are today in the prime of life, are today in full bodily vigor. They are American citizen who should be accorded equal privileges and equal rights to enjoy life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness—no less and no more.

Budget Has Been Set

It is important to make one more point. In accordance with the mandate of the Congress, our budget has been set. The public has accepted it. On that basis this Congress has made and is making its appropriations. That budget asked for appropriations in excess of receipts to the extent of four billions of dollars. The whole of that deficit was to be applied for work relief for the unemployed. That was a single minded, definite purpose. Every unemployed veteran on the relief was included in that proposed deficit—he will be taken care of out of it.

Will Not Bankrupt U. S.

I cannot in honesty assert to you that to increase that deficit this year by two billion, two hundred million dollars will in itself bankrupt the United States. Today the credit of the United States is safe. But it cannot ultimately be safe if we engage in a policy of yielding to each and all of the groups that are able to enforce upon the Congress claims for special consideration. To do so is to abandon the principle of government by and for the American people and to put in its place government by and for political coercion by minorities. We can afford all that we need; but we cannot afford all that we want.

Future Pensions

I do not need to be a prophet to assert that if these certificates, due in 1945, are paid in full today, every candidate for election to the Senate or to the House of Representatives will in the near future be called upon in the name of patriotism to support general pension legislation for all veterans, regardless of need or age.

Finally, I invite your attention to the fact that solely from the point of view of the good credit of the United States, the complete failure of the Congress to provide additional taxes for an additional expenditure of this magnitude would in itself and by itself alone warrant disapproval of this measure.

Realizes Disappointment

I well know the disappointment that the performance of my duty in this matter will occasion to many thousands of my fellow citizens. I well realize that some who favor this bill are moved by a true desire to benefit the veterans of the World War and to contribute to the welfare of the nation. These citizens will, however, realize that I bear an obligation as President and as commander-in-chief of the army and navy, which extends to all groups, to all citizens, to the present and to the future. I cannot be true to the office I hold if I do not weigh the claims of all in the scales of equity. I cannot swerve from this moral obligation.

I am thinking of those who served their country in the army and in the navy during the period which convulsed the entire civilized world. I saw their service at first-hand at home and overseas. I am thinking of those millions of men and women who increased crops, who made munitions, who ran our railroads, who worked in the mines, who loaded our ships during the war period.

"Of Those Who Died"

I am thinking of those who died in the cause of America here and abroad, in uniform and out; I am thinking of five millions of Americans who, with their families, are today in dire need, supported in whole or in part by federal, state and local governments, who have decreed that they shall not starve. I am thinking not only of the past, not only of today, but of the years to come. In thus future of ours it is of first importance that we yield not to the sympathy which we would extend to a single group or class by special legislation for that group or class, but that we should extend assistance to all groups and all classes who in an emergency need the helping hand of their government.

I believe the welfare of the nation, as well as the future welfare of the veterans, wholly justifies my disapproval of this measure.

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I return, without my approval, House of Representatives Bill No. 3896, providing for the immediate payment to veterans of the 1945 face value of their adjusted service certificates.

Raid Liquor Plant.

Agents from the Newburgh office, Department of Internal Revenue, raided a large liquor plant Tuesday, in a barn adjoining the farm-house residence of C. E. Knoblauch, on a back road between Maybrook and Burnside. The big still had two 30-inch columns, 27 feet high. The seizure included a 5,000 gallon pot filled with mash in process of distillation, four vats containing about 60,000 gallons of mash, 1,500 gallons of alcohol ready for shipment, and two high-pressure oil burning boilers. One arrest was made.

Navy Undecided

Washington, May 22 (AP)—In an official report, the Navy Department said today it was unable to determine whether a gust of wind or the giving way of the airship Macon's structure had caused the loss of the huge dirigible off the California coast.

Reported Attack.

Hsinking, Manchoukuo, May 21 (AP).—Japanese army general headquarters announced today that Japanese patrols had attacked "bandits" alleged to be operating in northern China and driven them eastward with heavy casualties.

Sentenced to Death.

Moscow, May 22 (AP).—The bookkeeper and cashier for a branch of the Soviet State Bank in the Frunzi quarter of Moscow were sentenced to death today for embezzlement of 400,000 rubles of the bank's funds.

Road Tests Next Week

Road tests for operator's and chauffeur's licenses are scheduled for Memorial Day week beginning May 27 as follows: Tuesday, the 28th, Wednesday afternoon, the 29th, starting at 2 p. m. and Saturday morning.

HOUSE LEADERS CALL ON F. D. R. WITH BONUS PLEA

Hoping to forestall a presidential veto of the inflation bonus bill, leaders of the Democratic house steering committee are shown as they called at the White House to present a 12-page argument for the Patman plan. Patman, Bonus Bill Author, Believes In 'Try, Try Again

By WILLIAM S. WHITE

Washington (AP)—The man whose name is almost a synonym for the word "bonus," apple-cheeked Rep. Wright Patman, is a living disciple of the old copybook homily, "If at first you don't succeed, try, try again."

The Texan—no less than the issue itself—has come a long way since 1929 when first he began clamoring nationally for immediate payment of the adjusted service certificates. In those crowded years the man himself has changed little and his quite unspectacular technique not at all.

Six years ago he started the fight by putting in a bill providing for payment, and simply hanging on grimly. That has been the basis of the formula ever since, a waiting game played by a man who learned right away how to wait.

First Success in 1931

In 1931 the Patman bill allowing veterans to borrow on their certificates actually got by; but in 1932 and again in 1934 victory for full payment, though easy in the House, was not to be had because of Senate and White House opposition. Long ago Patman bills began to take the label of "HR 1" meaning they were the first introduced in the house each session.

Their stout, unwilling author became accustomed early to defections in his own camp, to disagreement among veterans themselves over policies and plans. He invariably followed the custom of looking over both sides and quietly selecting the scheme he believed best. Whatever the decision, it was final.

Patman's long-used method has been to work with a minimum of display and a maximum of system. His plan has been to use the best available key men for every available phase of the campaign.

The leader himself doesn't run long on oratory as an art of persuasion. His bonus speeches are not particularly distinguished as speeches but strictly serious affairs though rarely bitter. He has a good many friends on the other side because he never transgresses the unwritten rules of parliamentary conduct.

REP. WRIGHT PATMAN

Politically Pugnacious

Essentially a man with a single interest—the bonus—he never departs for long from that subject. But, as a former district attorney, a zestful and crusading prosecutor, he sometimes turns his attention for the moment to some other subject and blasts away at some situation he doesn't like, or some individual he suspects.

Mild-looking and soft voiced, he is politically highly pugnacious, although the casual observer wouldn't suspect it. He has little "color" in the political sense of that term, has no hobbies, makes no social pretensions and lives the quiet life of a family man, sticks rather closely to his office—and his knitting.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—
WITHOUT CALOMEL
And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute. 25c at drug stores. ©1931 C. M. Co.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

By CLAUDE E. JACOBS

New York, May 22 (AP).—Most financial markets remained calm today as a fresh chapter in the soldiers' bonus controversy was being written at the national capital.

That the President, in personally reading his veto message to a joint session of Congress, would mine no words in disapproving the Patman bill involving some $2,000,000,000 of flat money, had been known for some time. The principal matter of suspense, so far as speculative quarters were concerned, was whether the veto would be overridden. The concensus was that the House might take this action, but that the Senate would sustain the chief executive.

Stocks were steady to firm and quite active in early dealings, although, here and there, profit taking was in evidence, and the list turned quiet and somewhat irregular in the later proceedings.

Share gainers of fractions to around a point included Union Pacific, American Telephone, Liggett & Myers "B," American Tobacco "B," Eastman Kodak, Home Sound, U. S. Smelting, U. S. Industrial Alcohol, Standard Oils of New Jersey and California, Amerada and Socony.

Allied Chemical and Columbia Pictures gave up more than 2 points each of their recent advances. The steels eased, as mill operations lessened, and the utilities and motors were inclined to drift lower.

Hundreds Apply For Jobs At Store Of Sears, Roebuck & Co

Today was a busy day for Leonard H. Beers, manager of the new Sears Roebuck & Co. store which is to open on Wall street early in June. He was deluged with applications for jobs.

Hundreds of men and women visited the makeshift employment agency of the firm, filling out application blanks amid the din of hammers and other tools, wielded by carpenters, electricians and other workers, who are busy getting the building in readiness for the grand opening in June.

Early this morning the crowd of employment seekers gathered on Wall street in front of the store, waiting for the store to open so that they might apply for work.

A sign was posted, "Go to rear entrance regarding employment." No sooner was the sign tacked on the fence that surrounds the front of the store than there was a rush for the Crown street entrance to the store.

Lines of applicants strung through the store for about 15 feet, through the yard adjoining the old Kingston hotel and down Crown street for a considerable distance.

Among the job seekers were men and women of all ages, mothers with babies in their arms or in carriages and others leading children by the hand.

In one barber shop two young men, earnestly wishing to make a favorable impression, asked for a hair cut and shave on the time payment plan.

Not being busy at the time the tonsorial artist went to work and then wished them luck as they left to be interviewed by Mr. Beers.

"Now my hopes for your success are as strong as your own," he said as the two left the store.

On the application blanks were questions of all kinds, including inquiries regarding physical conditions as well as qualifications for the various lines of employment offered by the store.

Reception For Rev. A. E. Oudemool

The Rev. Arthur E. Oudemool, recently appointed pastor of the First Dutch Church, was tendered a reception by the members of the congregation Tuesday evening in the chapel. The pastor was assisted in receiving the members and friends by the members of the church consistory, Harry Ensign, Howard R. St. John, Egbert Boice, John C. Millham, Clifford Rose, Arthur Fronefield, Victor Roth and Stuart Randall. During the evening a fine musical program was rendered with the following artists participating: Mrs. Florence Cubberly, violinist; Adrian cellist; Mrs. Benjamin W. Johnston, soprano; Mrs. Charles F. Doty, contralto, and W. Whiting Fredenburgh at the piano. Following the program refreshments were served by the Ladies' Aid Society and the Henrietta Wynkoop Guild.

BUSINESS MEN FAVOR EXTENSION OF THE NRA

Washington, May 22 (AP).—Approximately 1,500 business men, many from New York and New England, today urged their senators and representatives to continue NRA for two years.

Before motoring to Capitol Hill in a long string of taxicabs, they assembled in Constitution Hall and heard Ward Cheney, Connecticut silk manufacturer, assert:

"Give us NRA in accordance with the House program and we believe America will, long before the elapse of two years, be out of the woods and on the high road to prosperity."

He added that the meeting was a "remarkable spontaneous effort" and was "not a march and not a raid" on Congress.

"The critics of NRA say that it is an autocratic institution and that it smothers competition," he said. "They paint it as some huge monster, feeding upon the blood of our people. They forget that two years ago we were literally hanging on to the last flickers of life and that NRA came to us and saved us."

The business men were said to represent 150 or more industries.

Final Plans For Memorial Day

Thursday evening, May 23, at 8 o'clock, in the American Legion Memorial building there will be held a meeting of all committees of the Memorial Day observance, for the arranging of final plans. Chairman Morton Finch states that the plans are progressing but at this time he desires to hear from all organizations which anticipate participating in the morning parade, to be held at the usual time, 10 a. m. The planning entails a lot of time and work on the part of the committee and it is hoped by the committee that every patriotic organization in the city will at this time notify the committee by sending word to the American Legion building how many they will have in the parade.

4 Americans Gain Fourth Round Today

St. Annes-on-The-Sea, Eng., May 22 (AP)—Four Americans, including William Lawson Little, Jr., of San Francisco, the defending champion, today gained the fourth round in the British amateur golf championship.

The American contingent started the third day's play with six members. The first victim of elimination was T. Suffern (Tommy) Tailer, Jr., of Piping Rock, L. I., who fell before the steady shooting of Eric Fiddian, British Walker Cup player of 1932-34 and runner up in the 1932 championship. Tailer lost by a score of 2 and 1. The other defeated American was Harvey Shaffer of New York, who was accounted for by G. L. Q. Henriques, 3 and 1.

Edward Hull Weds

New York, May 21 (Special)—A former resident of Kingston, Edward I. Hull, 28, of 16 King street, Morristown, N. J., and Miss Phyllis S. Pike, 22, of 9 Prospect street, Morristown, procured a license to wed at the Municipal Building this afternoon. The couple stated they would be married today at Eighteenth Street Methodist Church by the Rev. C. F. Divine. Mr. Hull, a son of David and Johanna Deitz Hull, was born in Kingston. Miss Pike, who is a daughter of Porter and Evelyn Chambers Pike, was born in Calais, Me.

Craig-Keator

Tillson, May 22—Miss Elnora Keator and Floyd Craig, both of Tillson, were married by the Rev. I. P. Emerick, pastor of the Reformed Church, at his residence in the village on May 19 at 1 p. m. The couple was attended by Clarence Porter and his wife, nee Miss Anna May Craig, sister of the groom. The bride wore a gown of powder blue crepe and her attendant wore salmon pink crepe. After the ceremony a wedding dinner was served at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Willis Keator, attended by the immediate families of the bride and groom: Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Craig, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Porter, Mr. and Mrs. Willis Keator, Mr. and Mrs. Jessie Keator and daughter, Mae, and the bride and groom. Later in the afternoon they left for an auto trip to Albany and points north. They will reside in Tillson.

Lowenbach-Henry

Tuesday afternoon, May 21, at 6 o'clock a very pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Edward E. Henry, 2 John street, when their daughter, Florence Adeline, became the bride of Harry J. Lowenbach of Chicago. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Frank B. Seeley, D. D., pastor of the Fair Street Reformed Church. Only relatives and a few close friends of the family were present. The bride wore a simple gown of pale pink net and carried an old fashioned bouquet of pink roses and forget-me-nots. She was escorted by her father. Miss Llewellyna Gill of this city attended the bride as maid of honor. Miss Gill was gowned in figured organdie and carried a sheaf bouquet of blue delphiniums and pink snapdragons. The groom was attended by his father, William L. Lowenbach, of Chicago, who acted as best man for his son. Miss Henry entered the room to the strains of "At Dawning," sung by Miss Estelle Rogers of Albany, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Dana Goodrich, also of that city. The mantel before which the wedding service was held was banked with native dogwood. Following the marriage ceremony all the guests remained for a buffet supper, at the close of which the bride cut the wedding cake. The cake was appropriately decorated with a tiny wirehaired fox terrier and a tiny Welsh terrier, standing guard on top. The bride is a graduate of State College, Albany, and Columbia University, and has been engaged as librarian at the Boys' High School, Brooklyn. The groom is a graduate of the University of Chicago, class of 1921, and is a member of the Chicago Stock Exchange. Both Mr. and Mrs. Lowenbach are noted dog fanciers, Mrs. Lowenbach having owned the Gaye Welsh Terrier Kennel of Roslyn, L. I., and Mr. Lowenbach owning the Harlow Wire Haired Fox Terrier Kennels at Chicago. Both young dog lovers are continuing their hobby under the name of the Harlow Kennels. Mr. Lowenbach belongs to the Wire Haired Fox Terrier Club of America, while Mrs. Lowenbach holds membership in the Welsh Terrier Association of America, Westbury Kennel Club and the Long Island Kennel Club. Following a short wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Lowenbach will take up their residence in Chicago. Among those attending the wedding from out of town were Mr. and Mrs. William Reed and Selgas Reed of Tuckahoe, N. Y., Miss Eleanor Kerr of Roslyn, L. I., Miss Margaret MacEntee of Bath, N. Y., Mrs. William Frey of Hammondsport, N. Y., and Miss Estelle Rogers and Mrs. Dana Goodrich of Albany.

About The Folks

Mrs. J. Edwin Beebler and daughters, Joan and Diane, are spending a few weeks at the home of her mother in New Haven, Conn.

Thomas McGrath, Jr., who has been seriously ill in the Kingston Hospital and under the care of Dr. Frederic Holcomb, is now convalescent at his home at Phoenicia.

Mr. and Mrs. George Bazner of Detroit, Mich., have been the guests of the Rev. Francis P. Borowski, their cousin, pastor of Immaculate Conception Church, this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Matoli, of Vincent street, Lincoln Park, are receiving congratulations on the birth of a son at the Kingston Hospital this morning. Mother and son are doing well under care of Dr. Van Gaasbeek.

Walter W. Allerton of Somersworth, N. H., world traveller and lecturer, who spent last winter in China and Honolulu, is the guest of his cousin, Mrs. Clara Norton Reed, at her home on Crown street. While in China Mr. Allerton spent much time in old Pekin and has brought back with him much rare and before-unknown material for his now famous illustrated lectures on China, including exquisite lantern-slides. During the latter part of the winter Mr. Allerton devoted much time to writing on China, the publication of his writing to appear later.

To Follow Famous Motto

Albany, N. Y., May 22 (AP)—Taking a page from the book of the famous, red-jacketed Canadian "Mounties," state troopers assigned to New York's latest crime fighting unit have adopted and will be expected to live up to the motto "always get your man." Major John A. Warner, superintendent of state police, who has been organizing the seven units of the state's "Scotland Yard" authorized by the last legislature, laid down rules and regulations for the organization today. "Each man," he said, "when assigned to a case, will be relieved of all other duties. He will then be expected to follow up the case day and night until he has it solved. The men may work alone or in pairs or maybe whole groups will be assigned to a case."

First Anniversary Near.

Callander, Ont., May 22 (AP).—The Dionne quintuplets approached the first anniversary of their birth next Tuesday after earning an annual income exceeding that of the President of the United States.

Nearly 100 farmers are now completing cost-account records in cooperation with the New York state college of agriculture.

Promotion for Lieut. Milliken

Washington, D. C., May 22.—The Chief of the National Guard Bureau, by direction of the Secretary of War, today extended Federal recognition to Albert Edward Milliken as 1st Lieutenant, Adjutant, 1st Squadron, 121st Cavalry, in the New York National Guard.

This officer received his appointment from the Governor of his state, and has qualified for his Federal recognition by passing the thorough mental, professional and physical examinations required by law.

Lt. Milliken, who gives as his permanent address, Hurley Road, Kingston, attended the University of Cornell where he was a member of the Reserve Officers Training Corps unit. He has been identified with the National Guard since 1918 when he enlisted as a private in the New York Cavalry. He has held the non-commissioned grades of corporal, sergeant, and sergeant major. In 1922 he accepted a commission as a 2nd Lieutenant. He is a qualified marksman with the rifle and a sharpshooter with the pistol. In civil life he is an architect.

To Judge Essays in Tuberculosis War

The Ulster County Committee on Tuberculosis and Public Health has received essays on "Modern Weapons to Fight Tuberculosis" from high schools in Highland, Kerhonkson, Ellenville, Saugerties, Kingston and Wallkill, two essays having been submitted from each high school and forwarded to the committee. These essays will be judged by a committee comprising Judge Joseph M. Fowler, Mrs. C. N. Reed and Dr. Frederic Holcomb during this week.

The writers of the two best essays will receive first prize of $10 and second prize of $5 to be given at a committee meeting in the very near future. The two winners will go to Schenectady, WGY broadcasting station on May 27 and broadcast their essays between the hours of 5:30 and 5:45 p. m. The Hon. Joseph M. Fowler, president of the Christmas Seals Committee, will introduce the speakers. The names of the winners will be announced as soon as the judges have made their decision.

"Old Potato Nose" Gets Operation For Beauty

Philadelphia, May 22 (AP).—A "New millionaire" with a yen to "design his own ideal woman" has lost his chance to try out his specifications on Harriet May Heckman, the New Jersey woman who wants either beauty or death.

He flew to her by plane with an offer of "luxury and a career," she said, but she picked a Philadelphia doctor instead and today was waiting to see his success in transforming her "old potato nose."

The millionaire" told her he was "tired of women made by nature" and offered her fame and riches if she would permit a plastic surgeon to "make her over" according to his "specifications of beauty," she said.

The offer was "amazing and alluring" to the 37-year-old woman who offered to risk her life in return for good looks, but the Philadelphia surgeon was "closest to home."

After a half hour on the operating table of the Philadelphian's office yesterday, Miss Heckman went home to Glouchester, N. J., with a bandaged face and a cheerful outlook toward changing the body she loathes.

To cut down her 196-pound figure to sylph-like size, she will go on a diet.

Alteration of her "old potato nose" is only the first of a series of operations she hopes will make her beautiful.

Her life, she said, has been "like something out of a book" since her public declaration last week that she would rather die than live and remain homely.

"I have had 15 proposals of marriage and 25 letters from plastic surgeons from New York to Los Angeles, she asserted.

"The proposals are fantastic and make me feel foolish, and the pictures of some of the men indicate they need plastic surgery more than I do."

Fine White Ashes.

Maebashi, Japan, May 22 (AP).—Inhabitants of this town were compelled to walk the streets with umbrellas raised above their heads today as a violent eruption of Mount Asama, 35 miles away, showered the countryside with fine white ash. The ground was carpeted one-eighth inch deep with the ash fall, and Japanese and Java started forest fires on the southwest slopes of the volcano.

K. OF C. THIRD DEGREE HERE ON SUNDAY, MAY 26

Word has been received here this morning by Robert A. Donnarumma, grand knight of Kingston Council, No. 275, Knights of Columbus, that the New York State K. of C. degree team, of Brooklyn, N. Y., will exemplify the third degree at the Kingston Council Sunday, May 26, at 2:30 p. m. The class will be comprised of candidates from Catskill, Coxsackie and Kingston numbering nearly 100.

The exemplification of the major degree of the Knights of Columbus is the most significant and memorable work of the order, and the large assembly hall of the local K. of C. will undoubtedly be filled to capacity by members.

The first degree will also be conferred on a class Friday evening, May 24, at 8 o'clock. Also the second degree will take place the same evening in order to prepare all candidates for the principal degree on Sunday afternoon.

Hairdressers Give Dairymen Scalping In Game Of Errors

Errors, errors and more errors, most of them coming in the second inning of the City League game at the Athletic Field, Tuesday evening, helped the Crystal Beauty Shoppe submerge Ad Jones' Dairymen by a score of 15 to 1. The Dairymen's defense, which is supposed to be their main asset, looked more like a sieve than the stonewall it has presented on former occasions.

Nine errors in all were committed by the Dairymen and these, mixed with 12 hits, let the Hairdressers score at will. The infielders were the chief offenders, eight of the nine miscues being chalked against them.

Each one of the Hairdressers tallied at least once and, with the exception of Hoffman, each one hit safely.

While the Hairdressers were running wild on the base paths, Ted Freleigh, big right hander of Saugerties, was having an easy time of it on the mound. He kept five hits well spaced, not permitting more than one in an inning.

Jack Dodge was Freleigh's opponent and really deserved a better fate. Up until the last inning not an earned run was scored on him. He was hit hard, however, in the last frame, seven of the 12 Hairdressers' hits being poled at this time.

With both teams going down easy in the first stanza it looked like another close game was in store for the large crowd of fans. But when Jimmy Freleigh fumbled and booted Tiano's grounder all around the infield in the second things started to change. The boot seemed to be the signal for the rest of infielders to play ragged and before the dust had settled seven runners had crossed the platter, the result of four errors and three hits.

Two more Hairdressers dented the rubber in the third inning and in the seventh a barrage of hits, seven in all, netted them six more tallies.

Murdock's single in the fourth inning paved the way for the Dairymen's lone tally. He reached third on a fielder's choice and registered when he and W. Scherer executed a double steal.

SIDELINERS

Although the Dairymen played afield like they had ants they distinguished temselves by engineering the first double play of the season. Three double killings in all were made during the one-sided affair.

"Lefty" Ferraro spoiled the only rally the Dairymen started by robbing J. Freleigh of a hit in the sixth inning. After making a spectacular running catch he doubled Dykes at second base.

Baker also turned in a neat running catch of Scherer's fly in the second.

As one fan said to another: "It is just another ball game".

Benches on the third base line helped keep the crowd off the playing field.

The two leaders—Schryvers and Hercules—will furnish the fireworks tonight.

The score:

GAME TONIGHT

Bill Schryver's Lumbermen and George Walker's Powdermen, the pace-setters and only teams left that have not been defeated, will grace the diamond at the Athletic Field this evening. The Lumbermen beat out the North Rondout Social Club in the opening game of the season while the Powdermen came out victors over the Dairymen in their first tilt. Tonight's contest will leave only one on top and both teams are out strong to stay there. Bill Thomas for Schryvers and Eddie Scherer or Frank McGuire for the Powdermen are expected to be the opening hurlers.

Braddock Knows Chance He Has

James J. Braddock realizes fully the great chance he has for fame and fortune in fighting Max Baer for the world's heavyweight title at the Garden's Long Island City Bowl on June 13. It is an opportunity that was no more than a misty dream less than a year ago when James was one of the preliminary boxers on the card when Baer lifted the crown from Carnera. It's a long jump from preliminary fighter to challenger within a few months but this is what Braddock has accomplished and he is not unmindful of the big chance that he faces.

Of course, Braddock deserves much credit for placing himself in this enviable position. He worked hard for it. His victory over Corn Griffin put him in the limelight again, and he followed this with victories over John Henry Lewis and Art Lasky, which made him the most logical contender for the title. And now that he has this great chance he is not overlooking anything that might keep him from the championship. He is training faithfully and his condition is such that he himself is confident that he can defeat Baer, and this confidence will be one of the best assets he will have when he enters the ring.

Jack McCarthy, the Boston heavy, joined the Braddock sparrers yesterday and Jimmy now has four partners in camp. There was no boxing but the ring work will be resumed today. Braddock confined his Tuesday training to a five mile hike and was accompanied by Don Petrin. Braddock continues to scale 202 pounds which is satisfactory to his handlers.

Rain did not hinder Max Baer in his road work yesterday at Asbury Park. The champion maintained a slow trot for about two miles and then hiked back to his quarters. Max put in a busy afternoon in the ring, sparring five rounds, two each with Salvatore Ruggierello and Dynamite Jackson and one with Bob Frazer. He followed this with 15 minutes of gym work. Baer has ceased to favor his right hand while boxing and this would indicate that the champion's injured mitt has entirely healed.

Baer will perform his usual training stunts today but there will be no camp activities on Thursday when Max will go to Buffalo to see his brother, Buddy Baer, fight Big Boy Brakey.

Buddy Baer and "Big Boy" Brackey to Meet

Buffalo, N. Y., May 22 (AP).—Shooting for boxing's "big time", Buddy Baer, 20, brother of the heavyweight champ, and George "Big Boy" Brackey, 21, finally meet tomorrow night in a four-round bout that may send one skidding to oblivion.

Both are young, big and possessed of unusual strength, but neither has been forced to reveal whether these attributes mean anything or can be controlled.

The two heavy-hitting youngsters were scheduled to meet April 22, but Buddy injured a hand, so Champion Max informed Promoter Charles Murray, causing a postponement until tomorrow.

If Baer has what it takes, Brackey will still be a one-city fighter after their battle. "Big Boy" usually comes in wide open, slightly bewildered when the going is rough and tough, and inclined to forget a sleep-producing right when told to use his left.

Brackey has fought as a professional 11 times. His record shows nine victories, one draw and one defeat, the latter at the hands of Johnny Freeman, veteran of the ring. Freeman dropped the decision when they met the second time.

Despite Brackey's nickname of "Big Boy", Baer will overshadow him in height, weight and reach. Buddy scales 238, Brackey 215.

Kouhout and North Fight Tonight On Legion's Card to Save Boxing

Whether the American Legion will continue promoting boxing depends on how the fans turn out at tonight's card featuring Phil Elaqua of Albany and Mike Cavatta of Mechanicsville at the Municipal Auditorium.

These two boys are among the best in the Adirondack A. A. U. according to recommendations furnished Matchmaker John J. Finerty, Jr., who is in hopes that they and the rest of the pugilists he has paired, including two local boys, will put up a brand of fighting that will please the most fastidious.

Ralph North, who finished his man up in 54 seconds the first time he fought several weeks ago, and Frankie Kouhout, the rugged campaigner who has a constitution like iron and can take it without backpedaling, are the two local scrappers booked to fight.

North, a Port Ewener, is scheduled to box Frankie Palmer, a stablemate of Cavatta, the main bout contestant, and Kouhout, who lives in Wilbur, will trade leather with Benny Yerkes of Ellenville.

Frankie Palmer is expected to give North more opposition than the boxer he kayoed before, and all his friends are looked for to see just whether Ralphie is able to stand up with one of the A. A. U. boys of the higher class.

The Kouhout-Yerkes match seems to be attracting as much attention as any on the bill, mainly because the fans like "Kouie", a fellow who keeps boring in and tossing punches all the time. "I'd let a guy hit me all night to get over a haymaker myself," says Frankie. "That's the best thing I like to do—kayo 'em. I think I'll be able to do it tonight."

Besides the bouts featuring the two locals, and the main event presenting Elaqua and Cavatta, there are others that are expected to give the fans plenty of fistic amusement.

Matchmaker Finerty is depending a lot on the match between Larry Kellum, the Oneonta Wildcat, and Benny Ross, the hard punching Mechanicsville leather tosser, to give the fans the kind of action they like. Kellum has scored several close decisions over Ross. Benny hopes to turn the tables tonight.

The preliminaries are:

James O'Hagen, Ellenville, vs. Edward Hayes, Albany.

Johnny Tracy, Albany, vs. Johnny Hulaska, East Berne.

Frankie Pignatore, Albany, vs. Charles Forezzi, Albany.

The Legion, depending on boxing to swell its welfare fund, which needs all the inflation it can get, and those who want the manly art to remain on the sports calendar here, are in hopes that tonight's fistic show will be well patronized.

Ringside seats will be on sale at the door, as well as general admissions.

SULLIVAN TO BAER
A Pictorial History of the Heavyweights

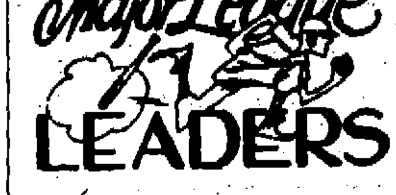

XI. WILLARD VS. DEMPSEY—1919

The Dempsey comet flared into the championship field as none had before or has since. The day he demolished the massive Jess Willard in the blazing sun of the 1919 Fourth of July at Toledo, Ohio.

A 187-pound savage, blackened by exposure to the sun—lean, dynamic, terribly destructive, Dempsey battered Willard's great bulk to the floor seven times in the first round alone, smashed his cheek bone, closed his eyes, hammered him so thoroughly that in the excitement no one heard the bell ending the first round. Referee Ollie Pecord held Dempsey's hand aloft, thinking the round was still on, as Willard rolled helplessly on the floor. Dempsey left the ring, and had to be called back when the mistake was called to everyone's attention by the frantic timer.

Tired from his exertions, Dempsey coasted in the second as Willard made a gallant comeback, but when Jack opened up again in the third he riddled Willard again, blasting him from one side of the ring to the other. Jess barely lasted the third, couldn't get off his stool for the start of the fourth, and thus became the first heavyweight champion ever to relinquish his title sitting in his own corner.

Senecas Will Play At St. Remy On Sunday

The St. Remy A. C. will play the Senecas at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon. The game will be played on the St. Remy diamond and a large crowd is expected. The home boys will turn out in their fine new uniforms which they have just received from Sam Bernstein & Co. Incidentally the boys appreciate the cooperation given them by Mr. Bernstein in securing the new suits.

Manager Sam Barnett, of the St. Remy team, would like to book games with local teams for Decoration Day and the Sunday following, games to be played at St. Remy.

Glenn Pitches One-Hit Game As Kingston Blanks Ellenville 11-0

First it was Bud Zoller and now it is Lou Glen.

Saturday Bud Zoller pitched a no-hitter and Tuesday at Ellenville in a seven-inning contest Lou Glenn nearly equalled that performance by pitching a one-hitter, the hit being issued in the last inning, against Ellenville High. The score was 11-0.

In the game yesterday Glenn faced only 23 men and of these only two got to first base. One reached first on Jack Murphy's error and the other on the lone hit in the seventh inning. This hit was a long single to center field by Van Wagner, Ellenville catcher.

Glenn fanned nine men and didn't issue a single walk. Previously he had been the Tarzan of the pitching corps, with streaks of wildness. In these wild spells he would issue walk after walk in succession and usually hit a man or two. In yesterday's contest, however, he was complete monarch of the situation.

Glenn's performance is the second best pitching performance on the Kingston record books, being second only to Zoller's history making pitching on Saturday. Before Saturday the best record was a two-hitter. Now this record is broken twice in four days.

Glenn's beautiful pitching was backed up by strong and timely hitting. Kingston getting seven runs in the second inning paved the way for a coast to the finish. Smith, Ellenville shortstop, helped the Kingston cause by making five errors in eight chances.

DeCicco Gets Three Hits

Ralph DeCicco, Kingston third sacker, gave the best sticking performance of the day when he rapped out three singles out of three trips to the plate. Chappy Van Derzee banged out three bots out of four trips to the plate, one of these being a triple. Linden and Maines each had a brace of hits.

The outstanding hits of the day were Linden's double in the second and Van Derzee's triple in the fourth. Linden's double was the highlight of the second inning rally and Van Derzee's triple was the underlying cause of the two runs in the fourth.

The two beautiful pitching performances of Zoller and Glenn in succession brings to mind several questions. Who is the first string pitcher? How will Kingston make out against the Port Jervis powerhouse on June 8? Where are the critics who predicted that Kingston would be weak in the mound department?

It is a bit staggering when one thinks of Kingston's two best all time mound performances coming in succession within four days.

In the last two games two Kingston batters had batting averages of 1.000. Maines on Saturday and DeCicco yesterday.

The 1935 season will long be remembered in Kingston High baseball history, if the present records are continued.

In yesterday's contest, Glenn had four assists which in addition to his nine strikeouts gives him a hand in 13 of the 21 putouts.

On Friday Kingston High will play Saugerties at Saugerties in the first of the annual home and home series. The game is called for four o'clock at the Saugerties Athletic Field.

(By The Associated Press.)

The graybeards who sit close to the fireside and mutter about the "good old days" had better start reading the sports pages.

The major league season is only five weeks old and already two near-riots have enlivened—or marred, depending upon the point of view—proceedings in the National League.

The Pittsburgh Pirates and Chicago Cubs were the combatants the first time; now it's the Phillies and the St. Louis Cardinals with Jerome (Dizzy) Dean occupying the spotlight as usual.

The Phillies won a 7-6 victory over the Cardinals yesterday but only after two hours and 44 minutes of furious scrapping that finally subsided when the last man was retired.

The disturbance began in the first when Bill Delancey, Card catcher, was chased off the bench for making "unpleasant remarks" and flared out again in the fourth when Hans Lobert, Phillies coach, charged Paul (Daffy) Dean with throwing a bean ball at Lou Chiozza. Paul dropped his glove and squared off and Brother Jerome rushed from the bench to join him. Before any damage could be done, however, the umpires intervened.

Ill-feeling cropped out again in the fifth when Al Todd, Philadelphia catcher, was hit by a pitched ball. Todd dropped his bat and started for the pitcher's box. Again Dizzy, perhaps remembering his encounter with Todd in the Texas League a few years ago when the catcher floored him, leaped out of the dugout. A few punches were exchanged but order was restored when Dizzy was escorted from the premises by police. Before the sixth inning was over, Lobert had been ejected for a too vehement protest.

Otherwise the National League program saw the New York Giants Brooklyn Dodgers and Boston Braves make a clean sweep against the west. The Giants, leading the league, scored seven runs in the sixth to wallop the Pirates, 9-4, and the second-place Dodgers scored seven in the first to trounce Cincinnati, 9-1. Boston, aided by Babe Ruth's third home run and fine pitching by Fred Frankhouse, downed the Chicago Cubs, 4-1.

Ray Radcliff, rookie outfielder, who has been burning up the American League, rifled one of Johnny Murphy's offerings into the left field bleachers and the Chicago White Sox nosed out the New York Yankees, 3-2, and strengthened their hold on first place. Ted Lyons, veteran right hander, went the route for the winners and held the Yankees to seven hits.

In the only other American League game, the Boston Red Sox got good pitching from Fritz Ostermueller and downed the second place Cleveland Indians, 7-2.

Comforter vs. Congregational.

Thursday night at Cordts' field, the Congregational softball team will play the Church of the Comforter softball team in a practice game. All Comforter players are requested to meet at the church hall on Wynkoop Place, at 6:15.

Migrates Easily

Home to the coyote is wherever he digs his den. He migrates easily and upon slight provocation. Coyotes multiply rapidly. The litters are large, averaging five to seven puppies, which look much like young German police dogs. With the coyote's adaptability, shrewdness, boldness, and ability to multiply, it is possible they may eventually inhabit the entire United States.

Blind Enjoy Smoking

The old belief that seeing the smoke is essential to the enjoyment of tobacco has been disproved by a census taken at blind institutions in England. At St. Dunstan's, famous home for blind soldiers, 95 per cent of the inmates smoke. Similar results were found at other blind institutions. Many some of them all the inmates are smokers.

MEET the WIFE

1. Mrs. Robert Tyre Jones

Mary Jones is an enthusiastic golfer . . . but takes lessons from others than her famous husband. . . . "A man might teach his wife to play bridge," says Bobby, "or even drive a motor car . . . but not golf." . . . So Mrs. Jones studies with Howard Becket and Chick Ridley, Atlanta professionals. It's just a diversion, though . . . her chief interests are the family, including Clara, little Bobby and Mary Ellen, and that beautiful home in an exclusive Atlanta suburb. . . . Friends say Mrs. Jones, born Mary Malone, and Bobby never had other sweethearts. She was married in 1934. . . . Accompanied her husband to parts of the world in quest of those golf championships. When he won his "grand slam" in 1930 and retired from competition . . . Mary Jones took up golf.

Port Jervis Trojans Want Kingston Game

Joe Cashman, 30 Church street, Port Jervis, writes that the Port Jervis Trojans would like to book games, to play either at Kingston or Port Jervis.

He adds that the Trojans are stronger than the team he brought to Kingston a couple of years ago. On that occasion the Port Jervis boys were defeated by a score of 6-0, Bud Culloton doing the twirling for the Kingston All Stars.

Huge Bubble Bursts

Boston, May 22 (AP).—The bursting of a $21,000,000 securities bubble apparently left thousands who invested with less than $100,000 today. Attorney General Paul A. Dever said a rough survey of assets indicated that scarcely $82,000 now is available of $16,000,000 invested in Seaboard Utilities securities, while only about $6,000 of $5,000,000 invested in Railroad Shares securities remained.

man and he told her it was of value. The suit was then begun.

Says Policy Never Properly Lapsed

Mrs. Hamilton's contention is that the policy was never properly lapsed and that she as assignee of the policy was never given proper notice of the closing out of the policy. She testified her husband always took care of the policy, paid the premiums and brought her the dividend checks to sign. After she was given possession of the policy she put it in a safe deposit box and never knew until 1927 that the policy had lapsed. Then Mr. Hamilton told her. Her contention is that never having been notified, as assignee of the policy, of the lapse of the policy that it was in effect at the time of Mr. Hamilton's death and that there is now due her the amount of the policy less the amount of premiums which should have been paid. Further she contends that as assignee of the policy the company had no right to loan to Mr. Hamilton on money on premium notes. In her complaints she seks the $25,000 insurance, less the amount of premiums which should have been paid, as her first cause of action and as a second action that the company owes her some $2,500 which was loaned to Mr. Hamilton on premium notes while she was the assignee of the policy. Her claim is that the company never had the right to loan money to Mr. Hamilton without her consent while she was in possession of the policy as assignee.

Harold Mortimer Brown appears for Mrs. Hamilton.

Contention of Defense

The contention of the defense is that the policy was properly lapsed, that proper notice was given, and that in no event could the policy have been kept in effect until 1930 when Mr. Hamilton died without additional premiums having been paid. The company claims that in extending the insurance to January, 1919, after premiums ceased to be paid in 1916, it abided by the terms of the policy, and that in no conceivable manner could the policy have remained in effect until 1930, the date of Mr. Hamilton's death. A. J. Cook with Louis H. Cooke appear for the insurance company.

Gormley. Florence Coffey was elected president, Isabel Gaede vice president, Betty McGrath secretary and Mary McGrath news reporter. It was decided to postpone the election of cheer and song leader until a later date when members will try out for the positions.

CATSKILL REDUCED NUMBER OF ITS STREET LAMPS

Catskill slipped back into the dark age Monday night says the Catskill Mail. Owing to the cut of $2,000 in the street lighting appropriation at the recent meeting of the taxpayers, many of the lights have been taken out and others were reduced in candlepower, with the result that many of the streets in the village were plunged into semi-darkness that night, the effect being anything but desirable.

Public Hearing On Milk

Albany, N. Y., May 22 (AP)—An immediate public hearing on the proposed milk marketing agreement for the seven states in the New York milk shed was expected today following the forwarding to Washington of formal requests from New York dairymen. The requests, more than a hundred letters and telegrams, were sent to the federal department of agriculture by State Agriculture Commissioner Peter G. Ten Eyck, it was announced last night.

Demon of Speed Claims Three in Accidents at Indianapolis Course

Indianapolis, May 22 (AP). — A gaping hole in a concrete wall, a break in a wire fence, marked today the race track where speed cost the lives of a veteran driver and two newcomers.

W. H. (Stubby) Stubblefield, veteran of the motor speedway course; his mechanic, Leo Whittaker, and Johnny Hannon, eastern driving sensation, rode their racers over the walls to death yesterday.

Never before had three persons been killed in a day during attempts to qualify for the 500-mile race held each May 30. The fatalities cast gloom among drivers and associates, but did not silence the roaring motors being tuned up in the garages and on the brick course.

The faces of those who dare death on the hazardous turns of the 2½-mile course were a bit grim, but their feet rested as heavily as ever on the accelerators of their speedsters. Fourteen already have passed the speed test of 25 miles at more than 100 miles an hour which defeated the three who died. Others await resumption of qualifying trials Saturday to win places in the starting field of 33.

A premonition that yesterday would be a day of death at the speedway was reported by Dave Evans, veteran race pilot. He told friends he had the idea definitely fixed in his mind that there would be fatal accidents because some of the drivers were taking the turns too fast.

Twenty-six drivers and mechanics have been killed since racing started here in 1909. Four spectators have died.

Stubblefield, Los Angeles driver, leaped the wall on the southwest turn yesterday, stripping the front wheels from his racer which overturned and landed twenty yards outside a fence. He and Whittaker, also of Los Angeles, were tossed clear, but died en route to a hospital.

A few hours before, Hannon had smashed through a retaining wall on the northeast turn before he completed his first lap at the wheel of a racer owned by the veteran Leon Duray. His mechanic, Oscar Reeves of Indianapolis, was in serious condition in a hospital today.

Stubblefield's death reduced to 13 the ranks of the "500-Mile Club," composed of drivers who have finished the long distance at an average of more than 100 miles an hour. Stubby joined in 1933 when he averaged 100.762 miles an hour.

KANTROWITZ PLANS CHANGES IN BUSINESS

David Kantrowitz, uptown clothier, who during his more than 30 years has built up a wide acquaintance in business dealings that have embraced not only Kingston, but surrounding counties, is planning drastic changes in his method of conducting business and will install an entirely new system.

Mr. Kantrowitz finds business conditions today much different from what they were only a few years back; shoppers are alert as to proper values and the days of "easy spending" are at an end. Recognizing these changed conditions Mr. Kantrowitz is preparing for an entire reorganization of his store and methods of selling merchandise. He will disclose to the public his new plans in an announcement which will appear in Friday's Freeman.

Cities Service Dinner

Guests numbered 160 at an affair sponsored by the Cities Service Oil Co., held at Trowbridge Farms, Kyserike, May 15. Broilers fried in butter were the main feature of the fine dinner served. The guests came early and stayed late, enjoying the golf, tennis and numerous other out of doors sport. There were also a baseball game and a tug of war. For the ladies who preferred it there were bridge games on the large porch. It is reported to have been a most enjoyable occasion. The Farm entertained 37 week-end guests, several of whom remained for a longer stay.

Service Club Meeting.

Warning To Summer Resort Employes

Use caution in handing over cash deposits to employers to insure appearance and employment at the opening of the summer season, is the advice given by Mrs. Lillian R. Sire of the State Bureau of Labor Welfare. The warning is passed on by Industrial Commissioner Andrews to cooks, kitchen help, waiters, chambermaids and other persons seeking or offered employment in hotels, camps and boarding houses.

In her memorandum Mrs. Sire said: "It has been customary for employers when engaging their summer help to require a deposit as an earnest of appearance for the opening of the season. In the case of established reputable employers the money is safely kept and is returned to the employes upon reporting."

However, according to Mrs. Sire, this practice has been grossly abused by some irresponsible employers. Deposit money is not returned until the middle of the season, or later, sometimes not until complaint has been filed.

The Labor Welfare Bureau will have investigators in the resort districts from June 28 to September 10, and will have an office in the court house at Monticello, to which complaints may be addressed.

We saw a fellow running down the alley back of the office yesterday and when we asked him what was the matter he said that he was a fugitive from a chain letter gang.

SWP HOUSE PAINT

You can tell the difference between SWP and a single pigment and oil job. The SWP job is glossy, fresh and smart looking. The single pigment job appears prematurely dull, dirty and shabby looking—even though protection may still remain in the paint. This is usually true because single pigment and oil paint has less control of "chalking"—weather roughens it, and dirt and soot cling to its roughened surface. Modern SWP with its Multi-Pigment, balanced formula, produces a clean "just painted" kind of job that stays lastingly beautiful. There is one sure way to get a lasting and economical paint job—insist on SWP.
Let us show you how little it will cost to give your house a REAL coat of paint-SWP
